Curtis found guilty of 1974 slayings

By Tom Beardslee

JACKSON — Lindol Curtis, a 42-year- old New Madrid County man, standing trial for the second time in the 1974 murder of his former wife Mary Curtis, and her mother Susan Gwaltney, was convicted for a second time and sentenced to two life sentences, in the court of Judge A. J. Seier here Wednesday.

Curtis was convicted of the slayings in 1975, by a New Madrid County jury, but the use of a last-minute witness by the state opened the door for an appeal of the conviction and the Missouri Supreme Court granted Curtis a new trial.

In making the ruling, the high court said that "reciprical discovery mandates that the state be required to disclose names and addresses of persons it intends to call as rebuttal witnesses."

The witness in question was Dr. J. F. Tuttle, a psychiatrist and superintendent of Farmington State Hospital, who also testified as a rebuttal witness in Wednesday's trial.

The trial followed much the same scenerio as the 1975 proceeding, with many of the same witnesses giving the testimony identifical to their earlier accounts.

The defense tried to show that Curtis did not "have the capacity to appreciate the significance or nature of his actions." The defendant's attorneys also tried to prove that Mary Curtis had put rat poison in sandwiches she gave him earlier in the day, and that the poison had an affect on his behavior, the evening of May 7, 1974, when Curtis admits shooting the two women in their home between Portageville and Risco.

Appearing for the state, whose case was conducted by New Madrid County Prosecutor Hal E. Hunter, Jr., was an eye witness to the shooting, Brenda Sue Underwood, 18, the daughter of Mary Curtis.

Miss Underwood, who was 15 at the time of the shooting, testified that her mother and Curtis had been in the living room of the rural frame home talking, and that Curtis called to her and her grandmother, Sue Gwaltney, to come into the room so that he could talk to them. She said he was sitting in a chair and had some dirty clothes in his hand. When they came into the room, he stood up and pulled a gun from the clothing. She said her mother told him to put the gun away, but that he began shooting. Stating that she and her grandmother jumped up and ran, Miss Underwood said she ran into a room where there was no exit and as she ran back through the living room to get out of the house, she had to jump over the bodies of her mother and grandmother. She ran to a neighbor's house to get help and was not harmed in the shooting.

Curtis said, in testifying in his own behalf, that he had gone into the house to take a bath and change clothes, but that after he had taken a bath he began to get hazy, and while he could remember some of the events of the evening, he did not actually remember pulling the trigger. He told the court he knew in his own mind that he killed the two women, but that did not actually remember doing it.

State witnesses included Mark Squires of Malden, at the time of the shooting a friend of Miss Underwood; Elain Underwood, 10, also a witness to the shooting and the sister of Brenda; Elmer Underwood, Jr., a younger brother; New Madrid County Coroner Gene Clayton; Highway Patrolmen Sgt. M. E. Duckworth and Lt. Kenneth Miller.

State's physical evidence included the murder weapon, a 9-millimeter or .380 caliber automatic pistol; photographs of the house and the bodies; seven spent cartridge cases found at the Curtis home; two bullets removed from Mrs. Curtis and identified by Lt. Miller as matching those fired from the murder weapon; spent bullets found in the wall and a chair at the Curtis home; a bullett found in the body of Mrs. Gwaltney, clips and live ammunition found in Curtis' car at the time of his capture, and a suicide note written by Curtis.

Sgt. Duckworth, an investigator for the highway patrol, said after he made his investigation at the scene of the murder, he found Curtis in his car, parked in a barn about three miles away. Curtis was unconscious and had taken a quantity of sleeping pills, leaving a suicide note on the dash of the car.

The note said exactly as it appeared, "I loved Mary too much to give her up it kept on my mind I couldn't get this thing off my mind I tried but it didn't do no good Mary stole that TV and Elmer Underwood was involved in it If Cowboy and Hal Hunter had done their job this would never of happen I didn't know what I done until afterwards and then it was too late. She push too much stuff over on me I guess I went out of my mind goodbye Lindol Curtis."

Curits' defense attorneys relied heavily on the testimony of Dr. Robert L. Lam of St. Louis, a neuropsychiatrist, who testified at Curtis' first trial that after two interviews with the defendant he felt that he had a mental disorder and did not possess the capacity on May 7, 1974 to appreciate the significance or nature of his actions. Dr. Lam was unable to testify in person, because he died since the first trial.

The state's witness, Dr. Tuttle, said he also interviewed the defendant and was of the opinion that he does not now, nor has he ever, suffered from a mental disorder.

A bench warrant was issued for Mae Williams of Marston, who was subpoenaed in the case, but who failed to appear. She was located and brought to court so that her testimony could be heard.

Other witnesses for the defense testified to the character of Mrs. Curtis and the differences she and her husband had over how the children were to be raised. They also testified to Curtis' unhappy childhood and his inability to get along with people. Curtis testified that he had been married five times and could not get along with any of his wives.

After a break for supper at 5:45 p.m., the jury returned to court to hear closing arguments, final instructions and to deliberate. The guilty verdict was returned at 9:14 p.m.

Lance says he made mistakes, denies wrongdoing, coverups

WASHINGTON (AP) — Budget Director Bert Lance, testifying "more in sorrow than in anger," declared to Senate interrogators today that while he may have made mistakes in running his Georgia banks he engaged in no wrongdoing and no cover-up.

Lance told the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee and a national television audience that his rights have "been treated in the most irresponsible and destructive manner" and that allegations leveled against him have been erroneous, misrepreented and exaggerated.

Moreover, he said, "some are completely misunderstood because those making the charge do not have all the facts."

The burly dicector of the Office and Management and Budget declared "I was a successful businessman ... and I thought I had an important contribution to make by coming into government service."

"The rights that I thought I possessed have gone, one by one, down the drain," Lance said.

"Were my rights protected?" he asked.

"We'll let the American people answer that."

In a slow, solemn drawl, from a witness table emblazoned with "Mr. Lance," the embattled budget director turned one by one to the accusations leveled at him over recent weeks.

"I do not contend that I made no mistakes when running these banks," Lance said in his opening statement to the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee.

"But to accept the assertion that I could not even manage a small country bank, one must ignore the objective facts," he said.

"Some of the claims are erroneous, some are misrepresented, some are exaggerated and some are completely misunderstood because those making the charge do not have all the facts," Lance said.

The committee, which recommended Lance's confirmation in January, is investigating allegations arising from Lance's activities with the Calhoun First National Bank of Calhoun, Ga., of which he was board chairman, and the National Bank of Georgia in Atlanta, which he served as president.

Lance told the committee that although his discussions with the staff in January "did not include a microscopic review of my affairs," he answered fully and accurately all questions and did not engage in any cover-up.

In regard to loans which he received from banks with which his own banks had special relationships, he said, "in no instance was there a finding that the terms of my loans

Massage parlor issue not over yet

BENTON — A request by Scorpio Massage Parlor for a temporary injunction and restraining order preventing Sikeston from enforcing its strict new massage parlor ordinance was denied Wednesday afternoon by Circuit Court Judge Marshall Craig.

But the legal fight with the massage parlor apparently is not yet over.

Attorney Gene Yokley, who represents the parlor, said he was considering appealing Judge Craig's decision to the Court of Appeals in Springfield and Massage Parlor owner Roger Skaggs promised Sikeston would see "my smiling face" for some time to come.

If Yokley appeals the ruling, he will probably do so within the next 10 days.

The city is now free to enforce its ordinance. However, city officials were not available this morning to say what their next action will be. They said recently that the first steps in the enforcement procedure have already been taken.

Yokley requested the temporary injunction on the grounds that the city did not have any authority under state statute to regulate massage parlors.

He said there are no legal cases in Missouri relating to the regulation of massage parlors or masseuses, except for one, the State vs Kaiser, which held parlor activities to be lawful.

City Attorney Charles Stamp said the state statute, which gives the city the power to issue merchants licenses, gives the city the power to regulate bathhouses, masseuses and a large list of other businesses ranging from horse shows to movie houses.

He said bathhouses and massage parlors are the same thing. The term massage parlor is a creation of the industry and did not exist when the law was written, he said.

He added that Sikeston has the power

Fire guts auto office

Fire gutted the interior of the office at Horn Auto Sales, 1313 E.Malone Avenue about 1:45 a.m. today, according to the fire division of the Public Safety Department.

The fire was discovered by patroling public safety officers, who said the fire apparently started in the southeast corner of the double-wide mobile home.

Detectives from the Criminal Investigation Division and the state fire marshall's office were expected this morning to look into the possibility of arson.

At 1:18 p.m. Wednesday, fire did extensive damage to a car at the corner of Cardinal Drive and Davis Blvd. The car belonged to Pat Bell, 227 Kinder St.

The fire was blamed on a backfire through the carburetor.

Fire division commander Vernon Morris said today that the smoke that filled the warehouse at Missouri Delta Community Hospital Sept. 8 came from an electric motor on a forklift.

Dexter schools postpone decision on new building

DEXTER — The Board of Education Tuesday night postponed making any decision on construction of a proposed physical education building after it received only one bid for the project, Supt. Thurston Hill said today.

The board had planned to spend about $40,000 to $45,000 for the building but the only bid received was for $103,884 from Brown Construction Co. of Dexter -- far more than originally planned.

The project is "not really urgent," Hill said, so the board will probably just not do anything for awhile.

The building was planned sometime ago, for whenever the board could get around to it, and started definite planning this year.

"It's like a lot of things, if you can do it, you do it, if you can't, you don't," Hill said.

The proposed building would include shower rooms, but would mainly be storage area.

The board also discussed the possibility of buying liability insurance for the board.

Reasons for this are that the insurance that had been provided by The Missouri School Board Association to member school boards has been canceled and a recent Supreme Court ruling removed government agencies from soverign immunity.

Finding such insurance is not easy, however, since companies are apparently not interested in selling this kind of coverage, Hill said.

Only one proposal has been presented to the board and that wasn't definite, he said.

Hill also reported that the school year has gotten off to a fine start.

So far this year there are only 2,311 students enrolled in the district, 18 more than at the same time last year.

The biggest increase has been in the first five grades with 60 more enrolled on that level than at the same time last year.

This is contrary to the usual trend, Hill said, since in most districts enrollment in those grades is decreasing.

Charleston man charged in shooting incident

CHARLESTON— Misdemeanor charges of discharging a firearm in the city limits and common assault have been filed against a 35-year old Charleston man, Charles Howard, in connection with a shooting incident Wednesday.

Police Chief Bob Ritchey said the incident was reported at 9:37 a.m. Wednesday and occurred on Washington Street at the Warren Street intersection.

Reportedly, Howard shot Freddie Lee Moore, 27, of Charleston with a 410-gauge shotgun. Moore was taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston, where he was treated and released. Shotgun pellets reportedly struck Moore in the neck, scalp, arm and back.

The shooting allegedly was the result of an argument between Howard and a third man, Jimmy Quinn, 26, of Charleston, who was also struck in the back by two shotgun pellets from the same shot. He refused medical treatment.

Quinn reportedly had been making threats to Howard, who pulled the shotgun from his car and fired the shot in the direction of Quinn, who was running from the scene. The shot struck Moore.

Moore allegedly refuses to testify if felony charges are filed against Howard. Ritchey said Quinn has also declined to prosecute Howard, who has been released on $100 bond. He is to appear on the misdemeanor charges Monday in City Court.

Kindergarten endorsed

The Sikeston Lions Club Wednesday became the latest civic club to endorse the proposed kindergarten complex for the Sikeston R-6 School District.

Club members voted the endorsement following a brief presentation by Supt. Sam Harbin.

Voters in the district will ballot next Tuesday on the $800,000 bond issue needed to build the complex.

Court sets county tax rates

NEW MADRID— The 1977 property tax rate for New Madrid County and the tax rate for assessments against railroad, telephone, telegraph and utilities property for school districts have been set by the County Court, which also authorized establishment of a Building and Equipment Fund and the transfer of certain funds to it.

The 1977 property tax rate totals $1.10 per $100 assessed valuation, which is a one-cent increase over the 1976 rate. The one-cent increase goes into the Johnson weed control fund, which was raised from the 1976 rate of one-cent per $100 to two-cents per $100 for 1977.

The remainder of the rate is apportioned the same as the 1976 rate and provides 50 cents for the general revenue fund; three cents for state property tax; 35 cents for the special road and bridge fund; 10 cents for the county library fund and 10 cents for the county health center fund.

The county's total assessed valuation for tax purposes in 1977 has risen to $94,827,003 from the previous $85,107,118. A break-down in current valuations shows personal property assessments of $10,635,623; real estate assessments of $58,302,270; merchants and manufacturers assessments of $7,479,816; and railroad and utilities assessment of $18,409,294.

The 1977 tax rate for assessments against railroads, telephone, telegraph and utilities property for the five school districts within the county has been fixed at $3.91 per $100 assessed valuation. The rate is fixed by averaging estimated figures supplied by each of the districts, which included an average of $3.21 for teachers and incidental funds and 70 cents for other purposes, including debt service and building funds.

The court has authorized the county treasurer to establish a Building and Equipment Fund and for the transfer of $35,988.55 into the new fund. These funds represent a balance in a fund that was created in 1967 for the construction of the County Welfare Office addition, which has been fully paid off.

In authorizing the new building and equipment fund the court said it desires to purchase a tract of real estate for the purpose of erecting a maintenance building for the use of the County Highway Department, and that there are insufficient funds in the special road and bridge fund for this project. The building and equipment fund has been specified by the court to be used for the purchase of real estate, construction of buildings and the purchase of equipment for the county.

Massage parlor issue not over yet

BENTON — A request by Scorpio Massage Parlor for a temporary injunction and restraining order preventing Sikeston from enforcing its strict new massage parlor ordinance was denied Wednesday afternoon by Circuit Court Judge Marshall Craig.

But the legal fight with the massage parlor apparently is not yet over.

Attorney Gene Yokley, who represents the parlor, said he was considering appealing Judge Craig's decision to the Court of Appeals in Springfield and Massage Parlor owner Roger Skaggs promised Sikeston would see "my smiling face" for some time to come.

If Yokley appeals the ruling, he will probably do so within the next 10 days.

Dexter schools postpone decision on new building

DEXTER — The Board of Education Tuesday night postponed making any decision on construction of a proposed physical education building after it received only one bid for the project, Supt. Thurston Hill said today.

The board had planned to spend about $40,000 to $45,000 for the building but the only bid received was for $103,884 from Brown Construction Co. of Dexter -- far more than originally planned.

The project is "not really urgent," Hill said, so the board will probably just not do anything for awhile.

The building was planned sometime ago, for whenever the board could get around to it, and started definite planning this year.

"It's like a lot of things, if you can do it, you do it, if you can't, you don't," Hill said.

The proposed building would include shower rooms, but would mainly be storage area.

The board also discussed the possibility of buying liability insurance for the board.

Reasons for this are that the insurance that had been provided by The Missouri School Board Association to member school boards has been canceled and a recent Supreme Court ruling removed government agencies from soverign immunity.

Finding such insurance is not easy, however, since companies are apparently not interested in selling this kind of coverage, Hill said.

Only one proposal has been presented to the board and that wasn't definite, he said.

Charleston man charged in shooting incident

CHARLESTON— Misdemeanor charges of discharging a firearm in the city limits and common assault have been filed against a 35-year old Charleston man, Charles Howard, in connection with a shooting incident Wednesday.

Police Chief Bob Ritchey said the incident was reported at 9:37 a.m. Wednesday and occurred on Washington Street at the Warren Street intersection.

Reportedly, Howard shot Freddie Lee Moore, 27, of Charleston with a 410-gauge shotgun. Moore was taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston, where he was treated and released. Shotgun pellets reportedly struck Moore in the neck, scalp, arm and back.

The shooting allegedly was the result of an argument between Howard and a third man, Jimmy Quinn, 26, of Charleston, who was also struck in the back by two shotgun pellets from the same shot. He refused medical treatment.

Quinn reportedly had been making threats to Howard, who pulled the shotgun from his car and fired the shot in the direction of Quinn, who was running from the scene. The shot struck Moore.

Moore allegedly refuses to testify if felony charges are filed against Howard. Ritchey said Quinn has also declined to prosecute Howard, who has been released on $100 bond. He is to appear on the misdemeanor charges Monday in City Court.

Court sets county tax rates

NEW MADRID— The 1977 property tax rate for New Madrid County and the tax rate for assessments against railroad, telephone, telegraph and utilities property for school districts have been set by the County Court, which also authorized establishment of a Building and Equipment Fund and the transfer of certain funds to it.

The 1977 property tax rate totals $1.10 per $100 assessed valuation, which is a one-cent increase over the 1976 rate. The one-cent increase goes into the Johnson weed control fund, which was raised from the 1976 rate of one-cent per $100 to two-cents per $100 for 1977.

The remainder of the rate is apportioned the same as the 1976 rate and provides 50 cents for the general revenue fund; three cents for state property tax; 35 cents for the special road and bridge fund; 10 cents for the county library fund and 10 cents for the county health center fund.

The county's total assessed valuation for tax purposes in 1977 has risen to $94,827,003 from the previous $85,107,118. A break-down in current valuations shows personal property assessments of $10,635,623; real estate assessments of $58,302,270; merchants and manufacturers assessments of $7,479,816; and railroad and utilities assessment of $18,409,294.

The 1977 tax rate for assessments against railroads, telephone, telegraph and utilities property for the five school districts within the county has been fixed at $3.91 per $100 assessed valuation. The rate is fixed by averaging estimated figures supplied by each of the districts, which included an average of $3.21 for teachers and incidental funds and 70 cents for other purposes, including debt service and building funds.

The court has authorized the county treasurer to establish a Building and Equipment Fund and for the transfer of $35,988.55 into the new fund. These funds represent a balance in a fund that was created in 1967 for the construction of the County Welfare Office addition, which has been fully paid off.

In authorizing the new building and equipment fund the court said it desires to purchase a tract of real estate for the purpose of erecting a maintenance building for the use of the County Highway Department, and that there are insufficient funds in the special road and bridge fund for this project. The building and equipment fund has been specified by the court to be used for the purchase of real estate, construction of buildings and the purchase of equipment for the county.

The National Taxpayers Union (NTU) says that the total financial obligations of the federal government, what NTU calls the "Taxpayers Liability Index," reached a record total of $7.583 trillion.

Sid Taylor, NTU research director, pointed out that the national debt (now $700 billion) is only one federal obligation. Unfunded federal liability on pensions and Social Security add on another $4.65 trillion. This plus such things as accounts payable, undelivered orders, long-term contracts, government guarantees, insurance commitments, unadjudicated claims, international commitments, etc., bring the total to $7.583 trillion.

The accounting for such government items has become so complex that massive fraud and embezzlement are possible. The depreciation of currency caused by the inflation deficit spending has created has meant the 1897 dollar is now worth 14 cents, and will be a nickel by 1982, NTU predicts.

AID REASSESSMENT

From Forbes

The Brookings Institution — which sometimes produces studies that illuminate rather than obfuscate — has reported that if the present law providing federal sums to help cope with city slums is left unchanged, Fort Lauderdale, for example, in a couple of years will be receiving four times as much aid as presently, while on the other hand Newark, N.J., will be getting less than half of the inadequate sum it now receives.

Rectifying that absurdity should be the first step Mrs. Harris, Carter's Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, can take before she gets totally bogged down in the mire that constitutes her department.

A VALUE IN THE NICK OF TIME

From The Washington Post

Wouldn't you know it? The Government announced plans to ban most fluorocarbon aerosol sprays — and the very next day, Robert H. Abplanalp, the man whose valves made those sprays possible, said a new invention now makes them obsolete. If Mr. Abplanalp is right, the users of such things as hair sprays and deodorants in aerosol cans will be able to go right on using them — as soon as the cans have been fitted out with Mr. Abplanalp's new gadget. And the Government's ban will become largely unnecessary.

This is, it seems to us, a fitting last chapter in the saga of the spray cans and the ozone layer. American ingenuity has triumphed once again. Even without intervention by the Government, it would have saved us from the dangers that an earlier bit of ingenuity had created. The aerosol cans will remain. The ozone will be protected. The threat of skin cancer will be diminished. Only the fluorocarbons will be gone. And no one will have to give up reliance on aerosol hair sprays or deodorants or antiperspirants or what have you.

The action announced by the Government is, of course, proper — with or without a new valve and a new propellent. There is sufficient evidence in hand to demonstrate that fluorocarbons may be depleting the ozone layer. The two-year period over which their use is to be phased out is an adequate response both to that danger and to the pleas of the manufacturers who wanted more time to make adjustments.

What is remarkable is the ability of three federal agencies — the Food and Drug Administration, the Environmental Protection Agency and the Consumer Product Safety Commission — to agree on the same program of action. The fact that Mr. Abplanalp has upstaged them by announcing a new valve that permits the use of safer propellents in aerosol cans does not diminish the importance of their agreement. There are other uses for fluorocarbons, primarily in refrigeration systems, for which regulations still need to be drawn. This interagency agreement provides a strong base on shich to build those regulations.

MORE AGRICULTURAL STRIFE IN CALIFORNIA

From The Los Angeles Times

Bitterness and conflict are no strangers to the California farm labor scene, and it would be unrealistic to expect years of animosity to have evaporated in the two years since California's Agricultural Labor Relations Board was established.

Still, both sides' behavior lately has been straining the limits of reason. The tempo of agitation has been increasing at a time when more disorder will harm the interests of every party and serve none.

The 1975 law that created the farm labor board also erected a hot seat: the job of a chief counsel to the board. This is the person who processes petitions and protests, who issues citations to violators, who administers the organizing elections that are the law's main purpose. The chief counsel is th pivot of every aspect of this law, and he or she must be both competent and painstakingly neutral.

Walter Kintz was the ALRB'S first chief counsel. He resigned last year after his departure had been demanded by farmers and unionists alike. Harry Delizonna is the board's second chief counsel. And now he is under fire from both sides.

Delizonna has now been branded incompetent and uncooperative by Cesar Chavez and his United Farm Workers of America. The Agricultural Action Committee, a farmer group, has tagged the counsel a stooge or a collaborator of Chavez. And many of Delizonna's own staff members have demanded his resignation in a petition that complains of his personnel policies and his handling of contested elections.

All these sallies seem politically motivated but we have no special insight into the intricacies of Delizonna's conduct. Doubtless he has made some mistakes, as his predecessor must have done and as anyone must do in such a tense and difficult job. Yet the ALRB staff under his rather firm direction has been doing, in general, a good job of maintaining the precarious balance between workers's rights and employers' rights. Probably as good a job as anyone could expect.

Those who criticize and demand change whould remember that the board by its mere existence is breaking new ground. There are decisions to be made without benefit of experience, precedents to be set that will influence agriculture and labor for decades to come, procedural guidelines to be established that will spell success or failure for the effort to bring justice to the fields.

All this must be accomplished in the teetering balance between land wealth and labor power. It must be accomplished in an atmosphere of rancor and instability. Obviously, the chances of success will be hindered, not enhanced, by more unnecessary personnel changes and shakeups now. It is not realistic or wise to demand the central figure's departure — not unless those demanding it really want to scuttle the law.

M-1, M-2...M-USDA

Food stamps are money. They're as good as a dollar at the supermarket.

Wonder of wonders, the House will vote on a new four-year food stamp bill that will allow the Department of Agriculture to print an unlimited supply of food stamp currency. And whereas the old bill required that stamps be sold at a sharp discount for real money, now they will be passed out free.

The only limit left in the bill is the eligibility requirement. Supposedly this has been tightened up to offset the generosity elsewhere. You have to say that your income after some still generous deductions, is below the poverty level. And you have to list assets to prove that you are not an idle millionaire. If one of your assets happened to be a Rolls-Royce you could still get food stamps, provided that was your only car and used in your work. The limits sound a little squishy.

Under the old law, the USDA could only issue as many food stamps as Congress appropriated real dollars to pay for. It had to come back for a supplemental appropriation if it ran out. Under the new law, it will be assumed that Congress will pick up the tab for whatever USDA issues.

Congressman Dawson Mathis of Georgia thinks it a big overgenerous for Congress to relinquish its appropriatons powers. He will offer an amendment today to set limits on how much food stamp currency the USDA can issue each year, a comfortable 10 per cent above what the USDA and Congressional Budget Office estimated the new bill will cost.

Failing that, we would hope that Congress would at least arrange to urge Arthur Burns to include that $5 billion, $6 billion or whatever billion in food stamps in his money supply targets. Now that we have two central banks even the most minimal prudence would argue for keeping track of what both of them are doing. — The Wall Street Journal

LIES--ALL LIES

WASHINGTON — While the miniseries "Behind Closed Doors" was very entertaining, I'm afraid it's going to give people a wrong impression of Washington. Since it was meant purely for entertainment, the producers took liberties with the way things work at the White House and in the rest of the town. This could damage the cause of clean honest government which the people in the country expect of Washington and fortunately get.

The idea of the film is as farfetched as anything ever seen on the TV screen. It is unthinkable that a President of the United States (in this case Jason Robards) would use his power and that of the CIA and the FBI as well as unsavory people in the White House to do harm to his political enemies. While this makes good theater, it obviously could never happen. If anyone suggested such a thing, the President would fire him immediately.

In "Behind Closed Doors," the characters, supposedly based on such real people as Bob Haldeman, John Ehrlichman, John Dean, John Mitchell, Howard Hunt and many others, were portrayed as schemers and sinister hatchet men, ready to protect the President at any cost, even if it meant violating the law of the land.

This, of course, makes a good story, but it could never have happened. The men who have worked in the White House always came from the best families, were educated in the best schools and raised in the American tradition of fair play and patriotism. They never would have resorted to any illegal act to further the re-election of the President. It just wasn't in them, and even if a President had suggested it, which no President would, they would have immediately resigned rather than carry out his orders.

The television drama also gave another very unreal picture of Washington. It showed a businessman trying to buy an ambassadorship for his wife with a large political campaign contribution. Now this is where the writers have gone too far.

In the history of American diplomacy, no ambassadorship has ever been given in exchange for a political campaign contribution. If this were true, we would have ambassadors all over the world who didn't know what they were doing, and we would have some of the most unqualified people in the country reporting back to Washington on the affairs of state.

For those of us who live in Washington, the most unfair incidents in "Behind Closed Doors" concerned the women of this town. The TV series showed them going to bed with men in power to whom they weren't married. The CIA director in the plot even left his wife for a widow, and a young college girl had an affair with a White House aide in hopes of getting a job.

The implication was that the morals in Washington are "loose," and that people go to bed with each other whether they're married to them or not. This is a terribly unfair picture to show because it gives the wrong impression of what Washington is all about. As long as I've lived here, I've never known sex to play any part in government.

Washington women think too much of their reputations to bed down with a man just because he is in power. And a man in power would never take advantage of his position to seduce a woman he was not married to. For one thing, it would compromise the high ideals the constituents expect of their politicians and high government officials. For another, it would be a sin.

When it comes to politics, power and sex, Washington is above reproach. Even the newspapermen who cover this town would never do anything to sully their reputations, such as lie, cheat or go to bed with someone just to get a story.

The reason this city has never been touched by scandal is that everyone from the President down to the most humble South Korean businessman has a sense of morality and ethics which, unfortunately, cannot be found in the rest of the country.

"Behind Closed Doors" has done a great disservice to the political system by presenting Washington and the people who work here in a terrible light. It is a fairy tale and should be seen as such. If there was even a smattering of truth to it, G. Gordon Liddy would not be our President today.

Inside Labor

LABOR CHIEF SCOFFS AT INDUSTRY'S 'FEAR' OF CARTER'S NEW LABOR PROPOSALS BY VICTOR RIESEL

Pro-worker, not anti-management, is the way Lane Kirkland, Victor Riesel's guest columnist today, feels about President Carter's projected labor law reforms. Mr. Kirkland is secretary-treasurer of the AFL-CIO and considered by insiders to be Geroge Meany's heir-apparent.

By Lane Kirkland
Secretary-Treasurer, AFL-CIO

WASHINGTON -- To hear the Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers tell it, President Carter's labor law reform proposals would force millions of workers into unions against their will and turn the government of the United States into a dictatorship run by the labor movement.

It just isn't so.

President Carter's proposals would not change one iota the rules and regulations governing labor-management relations. What is currently permitted or forbidden by federal law remains permitted or forbidden -- nothing changes. The President's recommendations to the Congress would not mean even the slightest shift in established collective bargaining relationships.

Federal law says that workers have a right to vote in a government-supervised, secret ballot election on whether they want a union to represent them. The law has said exactly that for 42 years. But the law has been violated in a wholesale manner.

What President Carter's proposals would do is strengthen the right of workers to decide if they want a union, by establishing timetables for elections which unions and management would have to follow and making sure that the workers have a fair chance to hear both sides before they vote.

Federal law also says that it is illegal for an employer to fire a worker just because that worker supports a union. But that law is being violated with increasing regularity -- the National Labor Relations Board ordered more than 7,000 workers reinstated last year. Today the penalties are so weak and it takes the NLRB so many years before employers actually rehire the workers, that employers find it cheaper to violate than obey.

When President Carter proposes is to strengthen the penalties for illegally firing workers and to get those workers back on the job as soon as possible.

Nothing President Carter has proposed would change the fact that a majority of workers would have to vote for union representation before there would be a union -- except in those very rare, extreme cases where the employer's tactics are foul and dirty that the courts decide a fair election is not possible.

When President Carter's recommendations are enacted, they will constitute only the third major revision of the nation's principal labor law in 42 years. The first two amendments came in response to management claims that the law was not fair to their interests. Now it is time the workers' interests were protected -- protected from long delays in enforcement, protected from illegal acts by employers. Protected, period.

Employers who obey the law as it stands today have nothing to fear from President Carter's proposals. That is why the cries from the business community are so amazing. Since no decent employer is harmed in the slightest, the business lobbies are pleading for the government of the United States to permit continued lawbreaking.

One of the tactics being used by employers is so outlandish as to be funny, but it is fooling some people. And that is the bill they had drafted and introduced by a Congressman from Illinois. They call it "The Employe Bill of Rights."

The fact is, it is a bill of wrongs. All it does is to legitimatize illegal employer tactics to block unions by threatening, coercing and interfering with their employe's rights to a free election.

For example, the bosses' bill proposes that the boss be able to call union elections. An employer has no more business calling a union election than a union does calling for an election of corporate stockholders.

If the AFL-CIO were to propose an "Employer Bill of Rights," Washington would convulse in gales of laughter. But some editorialists are actually taking the bosses' bill seriously, or pretending they do.

President Carter has proposed a balanced, sensible bill that would provide fair, prompt, evenhanded enforcement of the nation's labor laws. It is not pro-union or pro-management. It is pro-worker -- the people who have to make the decision whether they want a union or not.

That is what the National Labor Relations Act was intended to be -- a pro-worker bill. And that is what President Carter's proposals would make it, after 42 years.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

The Checkered Career of The Rev. Clennon King

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — America has produced few Don Quixotes more curious than the Rev. Clennon King, a gallavanting black knight, whose clanking crusades have led him into a host of misadventures.

His most celebrated sally was an attempt to join Jimmy Carter's segregated Baptist church in Plains, Ga. This turned out to be another tilt with the windmills. But King later pressed on to Hawaii for another joust with Carter's embattled former minister.

Next, the rambling reverend turned up in Washington where, for a moment of triumph, he attended Carter's new church. The last published account had him lecturing the assembled Southern Christian Leadership Conference, which the revered Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., led to glory. The two Reverend Kings, it should be added, were not related.

Clennon King's public capers have given him a cloudy image. He is looked upon by some as a rabble rouser, by others as a civil rights symbol. It might be useful, therefore, to clear away the mist.

It took us more than two weeks, scattering messages across the country, to reach King. The phone at his Divine Mission Church in Albany, Ga., has been disconnected. Messages sometimes can be relayed to him through his neighbors, usually children, who answer the pay phone at the service station next door. But such messages often bring no results because, one of his friends told us, King is dodging bill collectors.

Even this tenuous link with the world may soon disappear. Our associate Jim Grady finally got the elusive reverend to answer the telephone at the Albany Journal, a weekly newspaper, which employs him as a part-time columnist and circulation assistant. King sadly informed us that his major concerns these days are financial; indeed, he said, his landlord had ordered his mission out of the building.

He assumes he will find the money to get by. He paid for his recent Hawaiian foray by writing checks on his "hopeful" account – an account he hopes people will put money in, because he has none to support it.

The bankrupt but undaunted knight comes from a prominent black Georgia family. He began offending his fellowmen as a young history teacher at Mississippi's all-black Alcorn College. He wrote a series of articles for a Mississippi newspaper offering a hazy brand of laissez-faire, vaguely segregationist attitudes toward America's racial problems. This infuriated Alcorn's black student body which brought enough pressure to get him fired.

Unrepetant, King took an even stronger stand in a series of articles for right-wing publications like the American Mercury. White racists ecstatically embraced this reasoned black man who preached a sophisticated form of segregation, suggested subtly that the integration movement was communist-tainted and charged that the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People "fights freedom."

After leaving Alcorn, King decided to further his own education. Never one to take an easy road, he picked the segregated University of Mississippi. This assault upon the windmills earned him a brief matriculation at the state insane asylum, courtesy of Mississippi officials who employed a tactic the Soviet KGB uses against dissidents.

King then began what he calls "the craziest part of my life... I became depersonalized, a dead man." He took off for California where his dreams continued to burst like soap bubbles. In November of 1959, according to San Diego Superior Court records, King took his wife of eight years and their six children to Rosarita Beach, Mexico, where he up and deserted them. King claims the separation was a mix-up, caused by his efforts to claim political asylum in Mexico.

Mrs. King went on welfare to feed her family, and the authorities issued a warrant for the errant knight. His prison rap sheet shows King had several brushes with the law before he was apprehended by the California authorities in 1966.

He was charged with resisting arrest in Jackson, Miss., abandonment in Woodbine, Ga., and vagrancy in New Orleans. In Honolulu, he ran afoul of the law in three separate incidents – interfering with the police, contempt of court and malicious injury.

In 1960, while he was still on the lam from the California police, the fugitive ran for president. He made the ballot in Alabama. A state official confirmed that King received about 2,000 votes, placing far behind the victorious John F. Kennedy.

Accounting for the time between his presidential campaign and prison conviction, King explained that he went to Africa and taught school. He had two turbulent trials before he was sent to a California prison on desertion charges. At times, he had to be handcuffed and gagged. He exasperated his defense attorney. Then surprisingly, he pleaded guilty.

The reverend was not a model prisoner. He bombarded officialdom with handwritten petitions and complaints. He renounced his U.S. citizenship, the ministry and God.

At one point, he changed his name to Lenin Lumumba Abdulah, not because he was enamored with the Muslin faith but, he said, because he thought these three names would annoy the establishment in America, Africa and Asia.

King didn't get out of prison until Feb. 12, 1970, transforming from a rebellious convict to a dean of the now-defunct Saints College in Mississippi. In 1973, he was back in Albany, helping to distribute the Journal and writing "sermonizers" for the paper. Some of his missives got the paper into libel suits, for Clennon King is never noncontroversial.

Now the affable, loquacious King has reached another juncture in his checkered career. His financial status is bad even by his standards. But he plans to continue his crusades, with his goal now being "open churches" for everyone. He explains that the God he serves now is "bigger than the one I renounced in prison."

There's joy in loosened leaves crunching crisply 'neath your heel, and the soft caress of the pungent Autumn breeze that smacks of the smell of bonfires. Autumn—the year's twilight—at times lazy and sad, yet always sweet with memories that come and go, as you nestle her close to your heart. Oscar Bryn spoke truly: "Autumn! How it takes you back through the days; how you think of all you might have done and been; and how your ambitions rise to do more and greater things in the days to come."

AID REASSESSMENT
From Forbes

The Brookings Institution — which sometimes produces studies that illuminate rather than obfuscate — has reported that if the present law providing federal sums to help cope with city slums is left unchanged, Fort Lauderdale, for example, in a couple of years will be receiving four times as much aid as presently, while on the other hand Newark, N.J., will be getting less than half of the inadequate sum it now receives.

Rectifying that absurdity should be the first step Mrs. Harris, Carter's Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, can take before she gets totally bogged down in the mire that constitutes her department.

A VALUE IN THE NICK OF TIME
From The Washington Post

Wouldn't you know it? The Government announced plans to ban most fluorocarbon aerosol sprays — and the very next day, Robert H. Abplanalp, the man whose valves made those sprays possible, said a new invention now makes them obsolete. If Mr. Abplanalp is right, the users of such things as hair sprays and deodorants in aerosol cans will be able to go right on using them — as soon as the cans have been fitted out with Mr. Abplanalp's new gadget. And the Government's ban will become largely unnecessary.

This is, it seems to us, a fitting last chapter in the saga of the spray cans and the ozone layer. American ingenuity has triumphed once again. Even without intervention by the Government, it would have saved us from the dangers that an earlier bit of ingenuity had created. The aerosol cans will remain. The ozone will be protected. The threat of skin cancer will be diminished. Only the fluorocarbons will be gone. And no one will have to give up reliance on aerosol hair sprays or deodorants or antiperspirants or what have you.

The action announced by the Government is, of course, proper — with or without a new valve and a new propellent. There is sufficient evidence in hand to demonstrate that fluorocarbons may be depleting the ozone layer. The two-year period over which their use is to be phased out is an adequate response both to that danger and to the pleas of the manufacturers who wanted more time to make adjustments.

What is remarkable is the ability of three federal agencies — the Food and Drug Administration, the Environmental Protection Agency and the Consumer Product Safety Commission — to agree on the same program of action. The fact that Mr. Abplanalp has upstaged them by announcing a new valve that permits the use of safer propellents in aerosol cans does not diminish the importance of their agreement. There are other uses for fluorocarbons, primarily in refrigeration systems, for which regulations still need to be drawn. This interagency agreement provides a strong base on shich to build those regulations.

MORE AGRICULTURAL STRIFE IN CALIFORNIA
From The Los Angeles Times

Bitterness and conflict are no strangers to the California farm labor scene, and it would be unrealistic to expect years of animosity to have evaporated in the two years since California's Agricultural Labor Relations Board was established.

Still, both sides' behavior lately has been straining the limits of reason. The tempo of agitation has been increasing at a time when more disorder will harm the interests of every party and serve none.

The 1975 law that created the farm labor board also erected a hot seat: the job of a chief counsel to the board. This is the person who processes petitions and protests, who issues citations to violators, who administers the organizing elections that are the law's main purpose. The chief counsel is th pivot of every aspect of this law, and he or she must be both competent and painstakingly neutral.

Walter Kintz was the ALRB'S first chief counsel. He resigned last year after his departure had been demanded by farmers and unionists alike. Harry Delizonna is the board's second chief counsel. And now he is under fire from both sides.

Delizonna has now been branded incompetent and uncooperative by Cesar Chavez and his United Farm Workers of America. The Agricultural Action Committee, a farmer group, has tagged the counsel a stooge or a collaborator of Chavez. And many of Delizonna's own staff members have demanded his resignation in a petition that complains of his personnel policies and his handling of contested elections.

All these sallies seem politically motivated but we have no special insight into the intricacies of Delizonna's conduct. Doubtless he has made some mistakes, as his predecessor must have done and as anyone must do in such a tense and difficult job. Yet the ALRB staff under his rather firm direction has been doing, in general, a good job of maintaining the precarious balance between workers's rights and employers' rights. Probably as good a job as anyone could expect.

Those who criticize and demand change whould remember that the board by its mere existence is breaking new ground. There are decisions to be made without benefit of experience, precedents to be set that will influence agriculture and labor for decades to come, procedural guidelines to be established that will spell success or failure for the effort to bring justice to the fields.

All this must be accomplished in the teetering balance between land wealth and labor power. It must be accomplished in an atmosphere of rancor and instability. Obviously, the chances of success will be hindered, not enhanced, by more unnecessary personnel changes and shakeups now. It is not realistic or wise to demand the central figure's departure — not unless those demanding it really want to scuttle the law.

M-1, M-2...M-USDA

Food stamps are money. They're as good as a dollar at the supermarket.

Wonder of wonders, the House will vote on a new four-year food stamp bill that will allow the Department of Agriculture to print an unlimited supply of food stamp currency. And whereas the old bill required that stamps be sold at a sharp discount for real money, now they will be passed out free.

The only limit left in the bill is the eligibility requirement. Supposedly this has been tightened up to offset the generosity elsewhere. You have to say that your income after some still generous deductions, is below the poverty level. And you have to list assets to prove that you are not an idle millionaire. If one of your assets happened to be a Rolls-Royce you could still get food stamps, provided that was your only car and used in your work. The limits sound a little squishy.

Under the old law, the USDA could only issue as many food stamps as Congress appropriated real dollars to pay for. It had to come back for a supplemental appropriation if it ran out. Under the new law, it will be assumed that Congress will pick up the tab for whatever USDA issues.

Congressman Dawson Mathis of Georgia thinks it a big overgenerous for Congress to relinquish its appropriatons powers. He will offer an amendment today to set limits on how much food stamp currency the USDA can issue each year, a comfortable 10 per cent above what the USDA and Congressional Budget Office estimated the new bill will cost.

Failing that, we would hope that Congress would at least arrange to urge Arthur Burns to include that $5 billion, $6 billion or whatever billion in food stamps in his money supply targets. Now that we have two central banks even the most minimal prudence would argue for keeping track of what both of them are doing. — The Wall Street Journal

WASHINGTON — While the miniseries "Behind Closed Doors" was very entertaining, I'm afraid it's going to give people a wrong impression of Washington. Since it was meant purely for entertainment, the producers took liberties with the way things work at the White House and in the rest of the town. This could damage the cause of clean honest government which the people in the country expect of Washington and fortunately get.

The idea of the film is as farfetched as anything ever seen on the TV screen. It is unthinkable that a President of the United States (in this case Jason Robards) would use his power and that of the CIA and the FBI as well as unsavory people in the White House to do harm to his political enemies. While this makes good theater, it obviously could never happen. If anyone suggested such a thing, the President would fire him immediately.

In "Behind Closed Doors," the characters, supposedly based on such real people as Bob Haldeman, John Ehrlichman, John Dean, John Mitchell, Howard Hunt and many others, were portrayed as schemers and sinister hatchet men, ready to protect the President at any cost, even if it meant violating the law of the land.

This, of course, makes a good story, but it could never have happened. The men who have worked in the White House always came from the best families, were educated in the best schools and raised in the American tradition of fair play and patriotism. They never would have resorted to any illegal act to further the re-election of the President. It just wasn't in them, and even if a President had suggested it, which no President would, they would have immediately resigned rather than carry out his orders.

The television drama also gave another very unreal picture of Washington. It showed a businessman trying to buy an ambassadorship for his wife with a large political campaign contribution. Now this is where the writers have gone too far.

In the history of American diplomacy, no ambassadorship has ever been given in exchange for a political campaign contribution. If this were true, we would have ambassadors all over the world who didn't know what they were doing, and we would have some of the most unqualified people in the country reporting back to Washington on the affairs of state.

For those of us who live in Washington, the most unfair incidents in "Behind Closed Doors" concerned the women of this town. The TV series showed them going to bed with men in power to whom they weren't married. The CIA director in the plot even left his wife for a widow, and a young college girl had an affair with a White House aide in hopes of getting a job.

The implication was that the morals in Washington are "loose," and that people go to bed with each other whether they're married to them or not. This is a terribly unfair picture to show because it gives the wrong impression of what Washington is all about. As long as I've lived here, I've never known sex to play any part in government.

Washington women think too much of their reputations to bed down with a man just because he is in power. And a man in power would never take advantage of his position to seduce a woman he was not married to. For one thing, it would compromise the high ideals the constituents expect of their politicians and high government officials. For another, it would be a sin.

When it comes to politics, power and sex, Washington is above reproach. Even the newspapermen who cover this town would never do anything to sully their reputations, such as lie, cheat or go to bed with someone just to get a story.

The reason this city has never been touched by scandal is that everyone from the President down to the most humble South Korean businessman has a sense of morality and ethics which, unfortunately, cannot be found in the rest of the country.

"Behind Closed Doors" has done a great disservice to the political system by presenting Washington and the people who work here in a terrible light. It is a fairy tale and should be seen as such. If there was even a smattering of truth to it, G. Gordon Liddy would not be our President today.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

The Checkered Career of The Rev. Clennon King

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — America has produced few Don Quixotes more curious than the Rev. Clennon King, a gallavanting black knight, whose clanking crusades have led him into a host of misadventures.

His most celebrated sally was an attempt to join Jimmy Carter's segregated Baptist church in Plains, Ga. This turned out to be another tilt with the windmills. But King later pressed on to Hawaii for another joust with Carter's embattled former minister.

Next, the rambling reverend turned up in Washington where, for a moment of triumph, he attended Carter's new church. The last published account had him lecturing the assembled Southern Christian Leadership Conference, which the revered Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., led to glory. The two Reverend Kings, it should be added, were not related.

Clennon King's public capers have given him a cloudy image. He is looked upon by some as a rabble rouser, by others as a civil rights symbol. It might be useful, therefore, to clear away the mist.

It took us more than two weeks, scattering messages across the country, to reach King. The phone at his Divine Mission Church in Albany, Ga., has been disconnected. Messages sometimes can be relayed to him through his neighbors, usually children, who answer the pay phone at the service station next door. But such messages often bring no results because, one of his friends told us, King is dodging bill collectors.

Even this tenuous link with the world may soon disappear. Our associate Jim Grady finally got the elusive reverend to answer the telephone at the Albany Journal, a weekly newspaper, which employs him as a part-time columnist and circulation assistant. King sadly informed us that his major concerns these days are financial; indeed, he said, his landlord had ordered his mission out of the building.

He assumes he will find the money to get by. He paid for his recent Hawaiian foray by writing checks on his "hopeful" account – an account he hopes people will put money in, because he has none to support it.

The bankrupt but undaunted knight comes from a prominent black Georgia family. He began offending his fellowmen as a young history teacher at Mississippi's all-black Alcorn College. He wrote a series of articles for a Mississippi newspaper offering a hazy brand of laissez-faire, vaguely segregationist attitudes toward America's racial problems. This infuriated Alcorn's black student body which brought enough pressure to get him fired.

Unrepetant, King took an even stronger stand in a series of articles for right-wing publications like the American Mercury. White racists ecstatically embraced this reasoned black man who preached a sophisticated form of segregation, suggested subtly that the integration movement was communist-tainted and charged that the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People "fights freedom."

After leaving Alcorn, King decided to further his own education. Never one to take an easy road, he picked the segregated University of Mississippi. This assault upon the windmills earned him a brief matriculation at the state insane asylum, courtesy of Mississippi officials who employed a tactic the Soviet KGB uses against dissidents.

King then began what he calls "the craziest part of my life... I became depersonalized, a dead man." He took off for California where his dreams continued to burst like soap bubbles. In November of 1959, according to San Diego Superior Court records, King took his wife of eight years and their six children to Rosarita Beach, Mexico, where he up and deserted them. King claims the separation was a mix-up, caused by his efforts to claim political asylum in Mexico.

Mrs. King went on welfare to feed her family, and the authorities issued a warrant for the errant knight. His prison rap sheet shows King had several brushes with the law before he was apprehended by the California authorities in 1966.

He was charged with resisting arrest in Jackson, Miss., abandonment in Woodbine, Ga., and vagrancy in New Orleans. In Honolulu, he ran afoul of the law in three separate incidents – interfering with the police, contempt of court and malicious injury.

In 1960, while he was still on the lam from the California police, the fugitive ran for president. He made the ballot in Alabama. A state official confirmed that King received about 2,000 votes, placing far behind the victorious John F. Kennedy.

Accounting for the time between his presidential campaign and prison conviction, King explained that he went to Africa and taught school. He had two turbulent trials before he was sent to a California prison on desertion charges. At times, he had to be handcuffed and gagged. He exasperated his defense attorney. Then surprisingly, he pleaded guilty.

The reverend was not a model prisoner. He bombarded officialdom with handwritten petitions and complaints. He renounced his U.S. citizenship, the ministry and God.

At one point, he changed his name to Lenin Lumumba Abdulah, not because he was enamored with the Muslin faith but, he said, because he thought these three names would annoy the establishment in America, Africa and Asia.

King didn't get out of prison until Feb. 12, 1970, transforming from a rebellious convict to a dean of the now-defunct Saints College in Mississippi. In 1973, he was back in Albany, helping to distribute the Journal and writing "sermonizers" for the paper. Some of his missives got the paper into libel suits, for Clennon King is never noncontroversial.

Now the affable, loquacious King has reached another juncture in his checkered career. His financial status is bad even by his standards. But he plans to continue his crusades, with his goal now being "open churches" for everyone. He explains that the God he serves now is "bigger than the one I renounced in prison."

LABOR CHIEF SCOFFS AT INDUSTRY'S 'FEAR' OF CARTER'S NEW LABOR PROPOSALS BY VICTOR RIESEL

Pro-worker, not anti-management, is the way Lane Kirkland, Victor Riesel's guest columnist today, feels about President Carter's projected labor law reforms. Mr. Kirkland is secretary-treasurer of the AFL-CIO and considered by insiders to be Geroge Meany's heir-apparent.

By Lane Kirkland
Secretary-Treasurer, AFL-CIO

WASHINGTON -- To hear the Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers tell it, President Carter's labor law reform proposals would force millions of workers into unions against their will and turn the government of the United States into a dictatorship run by the labor movement.

It just isn't so.

President Carter's proposals would not change one iota the rules and regulations governing labor-management relations. What is currently permitted or forbidden by federal law remains permitted or forbidden -- nothing changes. The President's recommendations to the Congress would not mean even the slightest shift in established collective bargaining relationships.

Federal law says that workers have a right to vote in a government-supervised, secret ballot election on whether they want a union to represent them. The law has said exactly that for 42 years. But the law has been violated in a wholesale manner.

What President Carter's proposals would do is strengthen the right of workers to decide if they want a union, by establishing timetables for elections which unions and management would have to follow and making sure that the workers have a fair chance to hear both sides before they vote.

Federal law also says that it is illegal for an employer to fire a worker just because that worker supports a union. But that law is being violated with increasing regularity -- the National Labor Relations Board ordered more than 7,000 workers reinstated last year. Today the penalties are so weak and it takes the NLRB so many years before employers actually rehire the workers, that employers find it cheaper to violate than obey.

When President Carter proposes is to strengthen the penalties for illegally firing workers and to get those workers back on the job as soon as possible.

Nothing President Carter has proposed would change the fact that a majority of workers would have to vote for union representation before there would be a union -- except in those very rare, extreme cases where the employer's tactics are foul and dirty that the courts decide a fair election is not possible.

When President Carter's recommendations are enacted, they will constitute only the third major revision of the nation's principal labor law in 42 years. The first two amendments came in response to management claims that the law was not fair to their interests. Now it is time the workers' interests were protected -- protected from long delays in enforcement, protected from illegal acts by employers. Protected, period.

Employers who obey the law as it stands today have nothing to fear from President Carter's proposals. That is why the cries from the business community are so amazing. Since no decent employer is harmed in the slightest, the business lobbies are pleading for the government of the United States to permit continued lawbreaking.

One of the tactics being used by employers is so outlandish as to be funny, but it is fooling some people. And that is the bill they had drafted and introduced by a Congressman from Illinois. They call it "The Employe Bill of Rights."

The fact is, it is a bill of wrongs. All it does is to legitimatize illegal employer tactics to block unions by threatening, coercing and interfering with their employe's rights to a free election.

For example, the bosses' bill proposes that the boss be able to call union elections. An employer has no more business calling a union election than a union does calling for an election of corporate stockholders.

If the AFL-CIO were to propose an "Employer Bill of Rights," Washington would convulse in gales of laughter. But some editorialists are actually taking the bosses' bill seriously, or pretending they do.

President Carter has proposed a balanced, sensible bill that would provide fair, prompt, evenhanded enforcement of the nation's labor laws. It is not pro-union or pro-management. It is pro-worker -- the people who have to make the decision whether they want a union or not.

That is what the National Labor Relations Act was intended to be -- a pro-worker bill. And that is what President Carter's proposals would make it, after 42 years.

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Gov. Dixy Lee Ray says political writers want information "doled out and spoon-fed to them" and that she has never seen "any area of professional activity so obsessed with themselves."

Her barbs Tuesday were the latest in her strained relationship with the press here after being elected last fall. Gov. Ray once headed the Atomic Energy Commission and served in the State Department under Henry Kissinger.

Duayne Trecker, who quit the press secretary job this summer amid reports of a falling out between himself and Gov. Ray, says the strain arose when "the press came on with considerable more zeal than anyone had anticipated — to try to understand this governor and what makes her tick."

"It caused her to gasp and back up a bit and started a withdrawal syndrome. The press continued to press in. These things get intensified. I don't think the press' intentions were malicious," he said.

Gov. Ray declined to comment on Trecker's remarks.

The police said 17 more homemade time bombs were found and disarmed.

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Gov. Dixy Lee Ray says political writers want information "doled out and spoon-fed to them" and that she has never seen "any area of professional activity so obsessed with themselves."

Her barbs Tuesday were the latest in her strained relationship with the press here after being elected last fall. Gov. Ray once headed the Atomic Energy Commission and served in the State Department under Henry Kissinger.

Duayne Trecker, who quit the press secretary job this summer amid reports of a falling out between himself and Gov. Ray, says the strain arose when "the press came on with considerable more zeal than anyone had anticipated — to try to understand this governor and what makes her tick."

"It caused her to gasp and back up a bit and started a withdrawal syndrome. The press continued to press in. These things get intensified. I don't think the press' intentions were malicious," he said.

Gov. Ray declined to comment on Trecker's remarks.

'Enriched Flavor'™ tobacco makes MERIT unique among low tar cigarettes.

Since the introduction of MERIT, a number of other low tar brands have come along. But MERIT remains unique—the only low tar cigarette with 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco.

MERIT delivers what others can only promise: the flavor of higher tar cigarettes. The kind of flavor made possible by a breakthrough in tobacco technology.

By cracking cigarette smoke down into separate elements, researchers were able to isolate certain flavor-rich ingredients that delivered taste way out of proportion to tar.

These flavor essentials were then packed into MERIT, giving it extraordinary flavor.

Conservation, state battle over eighth-cent sales tax

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo (AP) — The money generated by the new one eighth-cent conservation sales tax should be controlled by the Missouri Conservation Commission, an attorney for the commission said Wednesday.

An assistant attorney general representing the state Office of Administration and the state treasurer argued that though the money from the special tax was for conservation purposes, the legislature should appropriate the necessary state funds.

The dispute over how to handle the money raised by the conservation tax was taken before the Missouri Supreme Court in two legal battles involving the tax.

At the November general elections, Missouri voters approved a constitutional amendment enacting the conservation tax and it went into effect July 1. State officials have estimated the tax would generate about $27 million a year.

One of the cases argued Tuesday dealt with whether the commission could spend the money from the tax without an appropriation by the legislature, while the second dealt with whether the tax applied to motor vehicles and trailers sold in Missouri.

In the first case, Cyrl Hendricks, the attorney for the commission, said by their approval of the new tax the state's voters had entrusted the commission with control of the revenue.

"And where the people have said they want the money spent, I see no reason for the appropriations process," Hendricks added.

The legal fight over spending the money arose after the state Office of Administration refused a commission request for $849,000 to buy 8,300 acres of land in Bollinger County for a wildlife and forestry area because the legislature had not appropriated any of the money for the expenditure.

Hendricks said because the conservation funds were specifically earmarked in the state Constitution for conservation purposes only, there was no need for a formal legislative appropriation.

The constitution also says no public money should be spent except in accordance with appropriations made by the legislature.

Asst. Atty. Gen. Bruce Anderson said although the money from the one eighth-cent tax was for "general" use by the commission, the legislature traditionally controls specifics on how state funds should be spent.

How much money should go to salaries or to land purchases were "the sorts of decisions" the lawmakers had always made in the past, he added.

The other action stemmed from the state Revenue Department's refusal to collect the conservation tax on motor vehicle and trailer sales.

Arguing the commission's position in the second instance, Hendricks said the high court in the past had ruled the sales tax was a tax on the seller, so the one eighth-cent conservation tax should be considered just like any other sales tax and the department should collect it.

Asst. Atty. Gen. J. Kent Lowry said generally the sales tax was collected from sellers based on their gross receipts, whereas people who bought cars or trailers were the ones who actually paid the sales tax on motor vehicle sales when they bought their state registtration certificates.

Thus the sales tax on motor vehicles should be considered a special form of taxation, and the one eighth-cent conservation tax should not be collected on it, Lowry argued.

House okays increase in amount retirees can earn

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retired people could earn up to $4,500 next year without losing Social Security benefits under a plan approved by a House subcommittee.

Its chairman says the current limit reduces some elderly persons to eating pet food.

Recipients who now earn more than $3,000 lose $1 in benefits for every $2 they bring in above the ceiling. That limitation, says Rep. James A. Burke, D-Miss., means some retirees are "living on a diet of cat and dog food."

In a move experts say could affect a million people, the House Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security Wednesday tentatively approved raising the allowance in 1978.

Under the proposal, recipients could earn $6,000 in 1979 without facing an aid cutback.

The limit on exempt earnings this year is $3,000. It is expected to go to $3,240 in 1978 and $3,480 in 1979 under a provision of the existing law that ties benefits to inflation.

The subcommittee's move, approved 9 to 3, was a compromise between proposals to abolish the limitation and others for a smaller or later increase. Republicans had suggested phasing out the limitation over three years.

As part of the compromise, the subcommittee agreed that the whole subject would be considered again when the panel takes up long-range changes in Social Security, probably next year.

The subcommittee is now putting together legislation to keep the deficit-plagued Social Security system alive.

All the votes it is now taking are subject to later change or reversal. Burke, the panel chairman, predicted the move "wouldn't get 50 votes against it" if it reaches the House floor.

Partly offsetting the cost of raising the income lid, the subcommittee voted to remove from the law a quirk that allows a retired person to earn as much as he can in a month if he forfeits his benefits for that month.

The cost of raising the earnings limit was estimated at $2 billion in 1979, $2.4 billion in 1980 and $2.5 billion in 1981. The savings from eliminating the monthly option were calculated at $400 million a year.

The subcommittee recommended adding some six million federal, state and local government employes to the system and voted to end the option state and local governments and nonprofit organizations have of withdrawing from Social Security.

Dayan carries peace draft

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan left Israel today with a draft peace treaty which he said Arab foreign ministers probably would reject in New York.

"I don't really think they know the plan, but I think they will not accept it anyway," Dayan told a news conference at Ben+Gurion International Airport. He said it would be a basis for negotiation, even if not fully accepted by the Arabs.

The Israeli proposals reportedly differ little from terms that previous Israeli governments were prepared to offer the Arabs and that Arab leaders have repeatedly rejected. The Arabs demand that Israel withdraw from all territory it occupied in the 1967 Arab+Israeli war.

NORWALK, Conn. (AP) — A fire had little chance of success at the Edwards Co. The firm makes smoke detectors.

Dozens of stockpiled detectors began blaring early Tuesday when a soldering machine used to assemble them accidentally ignited a small vat of oil inside the machine.

Smoke from the fire activated the smoke detectors and a security guard called the fire department.

How much money should go to salaries or to land purchases were "the sorts of decisions" the lawmakers had always made in the past, he added.

The other action stemmed from the state Revenue Department's refusal to collect the conservation tax on motor vehicle and trailer sales.

Arguing the commission's position in the second instance, Hendricks said the high court in the past had ruled the sales tax was a tax on the seller, so the one eighth-cent conservation tax should be considered just like any other sales tax and the department should collect it.

Asst. Atty. Gen. J. Kent Lowry said generally the sales tax was collected from sellers based on their gross receipts, whereas people who bought cars or trailers were the ones who actually paid the sales tax on motor vehicle sales when they bought their state registtration certificates.

Thus the sales tax on motor vehicles should be considered a special form of taxation, and the one eighth-cent conservation tax should not be collected on it, Lowry argued.

Dayan carries peace draft

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan left Israel today with a draft peace treaty which he said Arab foreign ministers probably would reject in New York.

"I don't really think they know the plan, but I think they will not accept it anyway," Dayan told a news conference at Ben+Gurion International Airport. He said it would be a basis for negotiation, even if not fully accepted by the Arabs.

The Israeli proposals reportedly differ little from terms that previous Israeli governments were prepared to offer the Arabs and that Arab leaders have repeatedly rejected. The Arabs demand that Israel withdraw from all territory it occupied in the 1967 Arab+Israeli war.

NORWALK, Conn. (AP) — A fire had little chance of success at the Edwards Co. The firm makes smoke detectors.

Dozens of stockpiled detectors began blaring early Tuesday when a soldering machine used to assemble them accidentally ignited a small vat of oil inside the machine.

Smoke from the fire activated the smoke detectors and a security guard called the fire department.

Workers at the factory got the day off.

House okays increase in amount retirees can earn

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retired people could earn up to $4,500 next year without losing Social Security benefits under a plan approved by a House subcommittee.

Its chairman says the current limit reduces some elderly persons to eating pet food.

Recipients who now earn more than $3,000 lose $1 in benefits for every $2 they bring in above the ceiling. That limitation, says Rep. James A. Burke, D-Miss., means some retirees are "living on a diet of cat and dog food."

In a move experts say could affect a million people, the House Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security Wednesday tentatively approved raising the allowance in 1978.

Under the proposal, recipients could earn $6,000 in 1979 without facing an aid cutback.

The limit on exempt earnings this year is $3,000. It is expected to go to $3,240 in 1978 and $3,480 in 1979 under a provision of the existing law that ties benefits to inflation.

The subcommittee's move, approved 9 to 3, was a compromise between proposals to abolish the limitation and others for a smaller or later increase. Republicans had suggested phasing out the limitation over three years.

As part of the compromise, the subcommittee agreed that the whole subject would be considered again when the panel takes up long-range changes in Social Security, probably next year.

The subcommittee is now putting together legislation to keep the deficit-plagued Social Security system alive.

All the votes it is now taking are subject to later change or reversal. Burke, the panel chairman, predicted the move "wouldn't get 50 votes against it" if it reaches the House floor.

Partly offsetting the cost of raising the income lid, the subcommittee voted to remove from the law a quirk that allows a retired person to earn as much as he can in a month if he forfeits his benefits for that month.

The cost of raising the earnings limit was estimated at $2 billion in 1979, $2.4 billion in 1980 and $2.5 billion in 1981. The savings from eliminating the monthly option were calculated at $400 million a year.

The subcommittee recommended adding some six million federal, state and local government employes to the system and voted to end the option state and local governments and nonprofit organizations have of withdrawing from Social Security.

Postal employes appeal to Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Groups representing postal employes, saying management of the mail system is deteriorating each year, are asking President Carter to seek greater control over the Postal Service.

The seven organizations, representing supervisory employes as well as unionized workers, say postal management is curtailing services and in some cases letting private businesses take over functions formerly provided by the government.

The groups made their appeal Tuesday in an Oval Office meeting with Carter. But the President made no promises, leaders of the employe groups said afterward.

"He said he would devote attention in the next several days to the problems of the Postal Service," said Emmett Andrews, president of the American Postal Workers Union.

A statement released by the groups said the postmaster general should be appointed by the president "to assure greater accountability."

The postmaster general now is appointed by the governing board of the Postal Service, whose members in turn are named by the president. Since the governors are appointed to nine-year terms, a president has little opportunity to control postal policy.

"Within the next decade, if action is not forthcoming, the Postal Service would be left with economic and social options which would be limited to the delivery of nonprofitable mail to remote areas, agricultural produces and large, hard-to-handle packages," the critics said.

DEATH TO HONESTY??

The following article has been written and paid for by the author as an American who is concerned about the suppression of truth in our country.

In the past fifteen years no less than three of our countries leading citizens have been shot down in public. Two are dead and one is crippled for life.

In each of these instances, any mention or suspicion of a plot has been quickly and carefully covered up and suppressed. Evidence has been destroyed to avoid further investigation. People have been threatened, bribed, and even killed to suppress evidence in these murders.

The American people seem to prefer to ignore vital facts as long as their personal lives aren't disrupted. They do not realize that this is exactly the attitude that will lead them into the hands of the anti-christ when he is ready.

The first example is President John F. Kennedy. He was shot down in Texas; but not by Oswald?

Point no. 1 – By remembering the the TV films of that event, one will note that President Kennedy was driven backward by the first impact of the bullet and then he fell forward. Anyone in his right mind should know that to be knocked backward when shot in the head the bullet would have to hit from the front. Not the back as claimed by the Warren Commission. If you get shot in the back of the head you will fall forward first, not backward.

Point no.2 It is impossible to get from where Oswald is supposed to have been when he shot Kennedy to the point all the way across town where he was arrested in ten minutes as claimed by the Warren Commission.

Point no. 3 – Isn't it strange that Jack Ruby had a gun; was able to get so close to a prisoner; and shoot several shots that were from different caliber guns? It seems that the sounds of the shots were from several points when Oswald was killed. Also Jack Ruby's family seems to be exceptionally well off since the shooting and Ruby was perfectly attended until his death. This suggests that he knew he was dying and was paid well for his sacrifice.

Point no.4 – Why and how did all evidence and reports of Kennedy's autopsy mysteriously burn in a filing cabinet drawer with other papers that were not even scorched by the flames?

Point no.5 – Why did certain factions of our government spend millions trying to discredit and destroy New Orleans Attorney Garrison during his investigation of Kennedy's death? He was threatened, harrassed, investigated, and pressured to drop the subject. The internal revenue service even got into the act. His witness seemed to meet with very untimely ends before they could reveal in court what they knew. Strange isn't it.

By closer scrutiny it is shown that several people in Dallas had strange accidents and a few deaths when they talked too much about what they knew about Kennedy's death and how he was killed.

Robert Kennedy had a top Mafia leader in protective custody and was on the verge of busting organized crime wide open. He was shot down under strange circumstances and his witness met an untimely death also. Strange isn't it? Or, is it?

George Wallace was upsetting the proverbial apple cart. In Florida he campaigned against forced bussing and the wasted millions of dollars spent on it. He won that state's primary with a landslide. The next night, President Nixon went on TV to declare that he would stop further bussing. It's evident that he was told to try to take the punch out of Wallace's victory.

A few days later, Wallace was shot down; but luckily lived. Right after that, Nixon went back on TV and declared that bussing would continue. Why not? Wallace and his ideas were defeated by a bullet! Rather a strong and strange set of coincidences, isn't it? Or is it?

Wake up America, before its too late. Demand honesty and decency in our government.

Get back to the "grass-roots" system where the people know what's happening and can do something a bout it.

Look what happened when President Carter presented his energy plan to Congress. Powerful oil and auto industry money and lobbyists convinced the representatives that it would be more profitable if the bills did not pass. Is that representation of the majority? I doubt it; don't you?

Have the decisions of our senators and representatives become based on where the most money is coming from. It would seem that way, wouldn't it?

Americans! Demand the truth and demand justice.

Robert Kennedy had a top Mafia leader in protective custody and was on the verge of busting organized crime wide open. He was shot down under strange circumstances and his witness met an untimely death also. Strange isn't it? Or, is it?

George Wallace was upsetting the proverbial apple cart. In Florida he campaigned against forced bussing and the wasted millions of dollars spent on it. He won that state's primary with a landslide. The next night, President Nixon went on TV to declare that he would stop further bussing. It's evident that he was told to try to take the punch out of Wallace's victory.

A few days later, Wallace was shot down; but luckily lived. Right after that, Nixon went back on TV and declared that bussing would continue. Why not? Wallace and his ideas were defeated by a bullet! Rather a strong and strange set of coincidences, isn't it? Or is it?

Wake up America, before its too late. Demand honesty and decency in our government.

Get back to the "grass-roots" system where the people know what's happening and can do something a bout it.

Look what happened when President Carter presented his energy plan to Congress. Powerful oil and auto industry money and lobbyists convinced the representatives that it would be more profitable if the bills did not pass. Is that representation of the majority? I doubt it; don't you?

Have the decisions of our senators and representatives become based on where the most money is coming from. It would seem that way, wouldn't it?

Americans! Demand the truth and demand justice.

Non-smokers will be next militants

BY ERMA BOMBECK

Mark my word. The next group of militants to dominate the American scene will be the non-smokers. I've seen it coming for a couple of years now.

The face-off started out civil enough. First, the non-smokers displayed a small sign with, "THANK YOU FOR NOT SMOKING." The smokers retaliated with a polite, but stiff, "YOU'RE WELCOME."

The smokers countered with, "Do you mind very much if we smoke?" to which the non-smokers replied with a smile, "Of course not. Just don't EXhale."

The exchanges have continued to gain momentum and every day in this country a bumper sticker proclaiming, "I QUIT!" crashes into a bumper sticker maintaining, "I DIDN'T."

Airlines have become a battleground for the dissention. The segregation of smokers and non-smokers has divided wives and husbands, executives and clients, and has gotten some illicit weekends off to a shaky start.

Recently, on a guided tour, the sightseeing buses were divided into smoking and non-smoking. One day when a man boarded the non-smoking bus, someone noted he had a pack of cigarettes bulging in his shirt pocket. "He's one of them," cried a non-smoker. "We don't want your kind on this bus," he said. "Take your nicotine breath and your stained index finger back to your own group!" For a minute, I thought the poor man was going to be stoned as he made a hurried exit.

"You shouldn't have talked to your Father that way," said the woman. "I know Mon," he said, "but sometimes being cruel is a kindness."

The battle is going to get worse. There are evidences everyday. Little things. Like a Marlboro man rode his horse on the lawn of a non-smoker in Wyoming the other day and made do do.

A sailor on one of the big ocean liners painted all the lifeboats SMOKERS ONLY. A smoker in New York daily goes around planting smoldering cigaretts on elevators and calling the N.Y. Times.

There is an underground movie being circulated showing that clean air causes bleeding gums.

Rumors have it that small fires are being started by militant smokers, but I don't for a minute buy that. I mean, have you ever known a smoker in your life who has a match on him?

Dear Ann Landers

Friend feels like she is drowning

Dear Ann Landers: Six years ago, my only son, a bright, handsome 17-year-old died as the result of someone else's reckless driving. He lived several weeks with severe brain damage and a broken body. My battle with grief has been tremendous.

Last year someone I know had a young child who was killed in an auto accident. I went to the home to express my sympathy. The woman began to phone me almost immediately after my visit -- "just to talk." Then she started to drop in unexpectedly at all hours because I had "been through the same thing and was the only one who understood what she was going through."

I prayed for strength to help her. I felt as if a drowning person had grabbed on to me and was pulling me down to the bottom of the sea with her. Now I feel guilty for resenting the way she has insinuated herself into my life. At the same time I know I must get rid of her or I'll crack up. What should I do? -- Sinking

Dear Friend: You do not owe the woman emotional support at the expense of your mental health. There is something sick (maybe even punitive) about the way she has glommed on to you.

Be perfectly candid. Tell her you cannot allow your old wounds to be reopened and her presence does just that. Suggest she work through her grief with a professional therapist. Then ring off.

Dear Ann Landers: Quite a while ago you printed a letter from a girl whose boyfriend was constantly tickling her. Your reply made reference to the fact that tickling was once a method of torture. A bet is riding on this. Please reprint that letter and settle it. -- Vitally Interested

Dear Vital: I had to dig back two-and-a-half years but here it is:

Dear Ann Landers: You have printed several letters about relatives who tickle children "All in fun." May I comment?

As a student of Oriental history and Far Eastern culture, I can tell you that tickling was a form of torture several centuries back. Any pediatrician will verify the fact that prolonged tickling can cause hysterics and even convulsions. The expression "tickled to death" is more than just a phrase. -- Vallejo, Cal.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a few words for that waitress in South Dakota who chastised women for being "stingy tippers." She said she would rather wait on men any day. I have had to endure many waitresses who ignored my presence, except to slap some food in front of me while they are asking my husband if he'd like more water, more coffee, or, "Was the food o.k.?"

If waitresses gave women the same attention and courtesy they give men, the tips might be bigger. -- Irate In Oklahoma

Dear Okla: I received a dozens of letters from women who wrote to express the same sentiments. The volume of mail and intensity of their wrath convinced me that there's something to it. There's got to be a lesson in here someplace.

Goal line unit saves the day twice

By CHARLIE FRANCIS
Daily Standard Sports Editor

The Sikeston Bulldogs work on their goal line defense for about ten minutes every day in practice. Judging from the results of the team's first two games, it may be the most productive 40 minutes they spend every week.

"They've made some key plays, especially in the Farmington game," said SHS defensive coordinator Tom Horton about the goal line unit. Horton's remark may have been an understatement, since the goal line troops have made game-saving stands in both the Farmington opener (7-6 Sikeston win) and the St. Thomas Aquinas game (7-7 tie).

Bulldog fans remember how Farmington was shut down on four plays after a fumble had set the Knights up 16 yards from paydirt. The unit nearly did it again after a bad punt and a good return gave Farmington first and goal from the two, holding them off for two downs before Floyd Hammers nosed the ball across the goal line on the third try.

The performance against Aquinas was less spectacular in that the situations weren't quite as dramatic. But they were important, nonetheless.

The Bulldogs usually go into the goal line arrangement when the opposition gets to about the seven yard line. The personnel stay basically the same, with the exception of David Smith, who replaces a linebacker to give Sikeston a more beefy six-man front.

"Each of the linemen is assigned to a gap," continued Horton, explaining the simple operation of the goal line troops. The linemen, specifically Smith, Russell Bean, Alfred White, Marty Nelson, David Willis and Mike Lasater, must prevent the opposition's offensive line from making their blocks on linebackers by controlling the line of scrimmage. This allows the Bulldog linebackers to flow with the ball, should the enemy decide to go around end.

"If they do their job right, they can stack up a quarterback sneak, ' said Horton about the six-man front.

Linebackers and defensive backs are assigned man-to-man coverage in case the opposition should try something fancy. Because of their effectiveness so far, the Sikeston coaching staff has not been reluctant to go to the goal line defense in short yardage situations even where the Sikeston end zone is not in immediate jeopardy. The setup almost dares the opposition to pass on those third and fourth down plays, another testimonial to the confidence the coaches have in the secondary's ability to adjust, should the occasion arise.

Horton said that the foal line unit looks upon it as a challenge when they are called upon in the big situation. "This is something we emphasize in practice. There's a lot of pride involved."

The non-performance of the SHS offense to date has put the "D" under the gun, and Friday night's 7:30 Mother's Night meeting with Perryville figures to be no exception.

The Bulldogs will face their first running quarterback of the year, converted fullback Stuart Prevallet. Prevallet's keeper have been good for 192 yards so far, ranking him third among Northern Division rushers at a clip of more than ten yards per game.

But stopping Perryville won't be a one-dimensional task, according to head coach Terry Smith. "We've got to get that fullback," emphasized Smith, referring to Pirate runner Kent Wingerter, who has rushed for 170 yards in two contests. Also not to be taken lightly is Jeff Bohnert, who is close behind Wingerter with 155 yards.

On the Bulldog side, 260-pound junior Russell Bean takes over a starting position on the defensive line, giving SHS two linemen who tip the scales at over 250 (three, when Smith goes on defense).

Coach Smith also has in store some backfield changes in an attempt to juice up the Sikeston anemic offense. Linebacker Linzie Lambert will take over at halfback, joining Glynn Felton, who swaps places with fullback Mike Shell.

The Dogs are putting their four-game Mother's Night winning streak on the line in the Friday night contest. The moms of all Bulldog players will be honored in pre-game ceremonies.

Colborn, Leonard pitch hot Royals to sweep

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Jim Colborn almost didn't make it to the ballpark — and Jeff Newman may have stayed too long.

"I thought I was supposed to pitch the second game," smiled Colborn Wednesday night.

"Then about 4:20 (p.m.) Whitey (Herzog, the manager) called me at home and I jumped in my car. I know I was hitting 85 (mph) on the way in. I got here at 4:30 and began warming up at 4:45."

The Kansas City right-hander arrived in time to help pitch the Royals to a 5-2 victory over the Oakland A's in the five o'clock contest, the first game of a double-header.

The Royals rolled up their 14th straight win, 6-0, in the nightcap, a game that saw Newman, the Oakland catcher, hurl the eighth inning for the pitching-thin A's.

Kansas City, winner of 25 of its last 28 games, has a magic number of 10 to win the American League West title.

Colborn, 17-13, surrendered seven hits to the A's before giving way to Larry Gura in the eighth. Al Cowens slammed a two-run homer and Tom Poquette singled in two more runs.

"John Wathan (Royals catcher) had the best line," said Colborn, who got the team's gong award for his tardiness. "He said, 'Hell, you don't earn enough money to work longer than that anyway.'"

In the second game, Dennis Leonard, 17-11, got plenty of offensive support as Hal McRae and John Mayberry each got three hits and Mayberry and Poquette drove in a pair of runs apiece.

Newman's appearance on the mound left the Royals, in general, surprised and McRae, in particular, irritated.

A's Manager Bobby Winkles called on Newman after reliever Bob Lacy was struck by a line drive in the seventh.

"No, he didn't ask to go in and pitch. I selected him," said Winkles. "You've got to pick someone. I can't waste my only reliever (Doug) Bair on a 6-0 game when I might need him in tomorrow's double-header.

"Newman throws strikes in batting practice. I figure he can go in there like batting practice and have them hit it at someone."

Norton, Young tune up for Nov. 5 bout

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Ken Norton continues to wonder whether Muhammad Ali will ever fight him again.

"I'll believe it only when I climb into the ring with him," said the No. 1 challenger from Los Angeles, who beat Ali once and then lost two disputed decisions to the current heavyweight boxing champion.

Norton, at 223 pounds, first has a date with Jimmy Young on Nov. 5, and the two tuned up with easy victories in nationally-televised bouts at Caesars Palace here Wednesday night.

Norton says Ali wants to avoid him, but the heavyweight champion — who has a title fight on Sept. 29 against Earnie Shavers — has gone on record saying he would put his title at stake against the Norton-Young winner.

Young, a 213-pound Philadelphian, started slowly but picked up speed and boxed his way to a one-sided 10-round verdict over Jody Ballard, 205, of Houston.

Goal line unit saves the day twice

By CHARLIE FRANCIS
Daily Standard Sports Editor

The Sikeston Bulldogs work on their goal line defense for about ten minutes every day in practice. Judging from the results of the team's first two games, it may be the most productive 40 minutes they spend every week.

"They've made some key plays, especially in the Farmington game," said SHS defensive coordinator Tom Horton about the goal line unit. Horton's remark may have been an understatement, since the goal line troops have made game-saving stands in both the Farmington opener (7-6 Sikeston win) and the St. Thomas Aquinas game (7-7 tie).

Bulldog fans remember how Farmington was shut down on four plays after a fumble had set the Knights up 16 yards from paydirt. The unit nearly did it again after a bad punt and a good return gave Farmington first and goal from the two, holding them off for two downs before Floyd Hammers nosed the ball across the goal line on the third try.

The performance against Aquinas was less spectacular in that the situations weren't quite as dramatic. But they were important, nonetheless.

The Bulldogs usually go into the goal line arrangement when the opposition gets to about the seven yard line. The personnel stay basically the same, with the exception of David Smith, who replaces a linebacker to give Sikeston a more beefy six-man front.

"Each of the linemen is assigned to a gap," continued Horton, explaining the simple operation of the goal line troops. The linemen, specifically Smith, Russell Bean, Alfred White, Marty Nelson, David Willis and Mike Lasater, must prevent the opposition's offensive line from making their blocks on linebackers by controlling the line of scrimmage. This allows the Bulldog linebackers to flow with the ball, should the enemy decide to go around end.

"If they do their job right, they can stack up a quarterback sneak," said Horton about the six-man front.

Linebackers and defensive backs are assigned man-to-man coverage in case the opposition should try something fancy. Because of their effectiveness so far, the Sikeston coaching staff has not been reluctant to go to the goal line defense in short yardage situations even where the Sikeston end zone is not in immediate jeopardy. The setup almost dares the opposition to pass on those third and fourth down plays, another testimonial to the confidence the coaches have in the secondary's ability to adjust, should the occasion arise.

Horton said that the foal line unit looks upon it as a challenge when they are called upon in the big situation. "This is something we emphasize in practice. There's a lot of pride involved."

The non-performance of the SHS offense to date has put the "D" under the gun, and Friday night's 7:30 Mother's Night meeting with Perryville figures to be no exception.

The Bulldogs will face their first running quarterback of the year, converted fullback Stuart Prevallet. Prevallet's keeper have been good for 192 yards so far, ranking him third among Northern Division rushers at a clip of more than ten yards per game.

But stopping Perryville won't be a one-dimensional task, according to head coach Terry Smith. "We've got to get that fullback," emphasized Smith, referring to Pirate runner Kent Wingerter, who has rushed for 170 yards in two contests. Also not to be taken lightly is Jeff Bohnert, who is close behind Wingerter with 155 yards.

On the Bulldog side, 260-pound junior Russell Bean takes over a starting position on the defensive line, giving SHS two linemen who tip the scales at over 250 (three, when Smith goes on defense).

Coach Smith also has in store some backfield changes in an attempt to juice up the Sikeston anemic offense. Linebacker Linzie Lambert will take over at halfback, joining Glynn Felton, who swaps places with fullback Mike Shell.

The Dogs are putting their four-game Mother's Night winning streak on the line in the Friday night contest. The moms of all Bulldog players will be honored in pre-game ceremonies.

AP picks Raiders, Pats, Cincy

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

The Oakland Raiders, as any schoolboy knows, are the class of the American Conference, right?

Wrong. Oh, any schoolboy in the Bay Area might say that. But there are a lot of youngsters in, say, greater metropolitan New England and regional Cincinnati and maybe a few other communities who will say .. well, who'll say that if you limit your thinking to the National Football League's defending champions.

The Raiders are unquestionably the best of the West — San Diego will probably step in to replace Denver as the division's distant runner-up this season — but New England and Cincinnati have every right to demand equal billing. The Patriots, the only team to beat Oakland last year, appear poised to outrun Baltimore for the Eastern title this time. And the Bengals, nosed out by Pittsburgh in last year's scramble to the top of the Central Division, should outclaw the Steelers this time.

It's tough predicting division winners — but that's a breeze when compared to trying to figure which team will be the AFC entry in Super Bowl XII next Jan. 15 in New Orleans' Superdome.

The Raiders may be the reigning champions and they may look every bit as good as they did when they demolished Minnesota for the title. But as any Super Bowl champion (except perhaps for Green Bay, Miami and Pittsburgh) will say, winning the title is the easy part. Defending it is a different story.

Before the AFC lines up for the playoffs, here's how the final regular-season standings will look:

EAST DIVISION
New England Patriots
Baltimore Colts
Miami Dolphins
Buffalo Bills
New York Jets

CENTRAL DIVISION
Cincinnati Bengals
Pittsburgh Steelers
Houston Oilers
Cleveland Browns

WEST DIVISION
Oakland Raiders
San Diego Chargers
Denver Broncos
Kansas City Chiefs
Seattle Seahawks

The numbers the Raiders throw around are terrifying, like Ken Stabler's league-high marks of 27 touchdown passes and Cliff Branch's 12 touchdown catches and Mark van Eeghen's 1,012 yards rushing ... and the two biggest numbers of them all: Oakland 32, Minnesota 14.

With Stabler and Branch and Van Eeghen and Dave Casper and old reliable Fred Biletnikoff on offense, with terrors like Otis Sistrunk, George Atkinson, Ted Hendricks and others on defense, with Al Davis continuing to bring diverse (and sometimes outcast) talent together, and with John Madden masterminding it all into the most successful team of the last decade, there's no sign of relief in sight for the rest of the West.

San Diego, with some major additions, should have its first winning season since 1969. Quarterback James Harris and tight end Bob Klein have arrived from Los Angeles with some solid credentials, fleet receiver Johnny Rodgers has arrived following stardom in Canada and Joe Washington, out all of 1976 with an injury, adds power to a backfield of potential 1,000-yarders Rickey Young and Don Woods.

Red Miller's big worry, as he starts his head coaching career in Denver, will be whether erratic quarterback Craig Morton has what it takes to keep the Broncos moving. If he can (and with help from Haven Moses, Riley Odoms and Otis Arm-

Panel favors Dexter, Jays and Dogs

The 1977 season enters its third week and still our Daily Standard panel of "experts" is looking for a perfect performance by one of its members. Rookie Mike Marsh topped the group last week, nailing seven of nine picks and missing the two tie games. Charlie Francis and Dale Forbis also were 7-2, but their point margins were larger than Mike's (123). In his first try David Ziegenhorn missed by only 116 points, lowest on the panel, but hit just six of nine games.

This week the panel finally branches out with many disagreements and a clear winner should be easily picked.

DEXTER AT CAPE — Is the Dexter defense for real? Has Dutch Meyer really put the Cape program back on its feet? These questions could be answered tonight when the two meet at Houck Stadium. Neither team has lost, but neither has played a Northern Division school. It will be easier to judge how strong the Cats and Tigers are after this one.

CHIEF: Dexter by 10,
FORB: Cape by 3,
WHALE: Dexter by 10,
ZIG: Dexter by 8.

CHARLESTON AT FLAT River —The panel splits on this one, with all predicting a close game. Flat River isn't tremendously strong, but the Jays may have troubles with the non-conference foe.

CHIEF: Charleston by 2,
FORB: Flat River by 3,
WHALE: Flat River by 3,
ZIG: Charleston by 6.

STE. GENEVIEVE AT JACKSON — Jackson defeated Fredericktown by nearly the same margin as Perryville. Now they play St. Gen the week after the Warriors tied Perryville 7-7. The panel sees Jackson as the winner, but, except for Mike "Whale" Marsh, not by much.

CHIEF: Jackson by 14,
FORB: Jackson by 6,
WHALE: Jackson by 21,
ZIG: Jackson by 12.

KENNETT AT POPLAR BLUFF — The Mule's offense continues to struggle and new coach Kent Miller hopes to pickup win number two in their Friday meeting at Bluff's "pit." The Whale thinks that Kennett is for real — others look for Bluff to run away with their first easy win.

CHIEF: Poplar Bluff by 28,
FORB: Poplar Bluff by 14,
WHALE: Poplar Bluff by 4,
ZIG: Poplar Bluff by 12.

HAYTI AT CARUTHERSVILLE — Caruthersville all the way. 'Nuff said.

CHIEF: Caruthersville by 21,
FORB: Caruthersville by 28,
WHALE: Caruthersville by 22,
ZIG: Caruthersville by 24.

SOUTH PEMISCOT AT CHAFFEE — We hope the Bulldogs enjoyed their winning "streak." Chaffee coach Charlie Vickery was understandably annoyed at his team's lack of success against Dexter. Look for Chaffee to come back with a roar.

CHIEF: Chaffee by 34,
FORB: Chaffee by 33,
WHALE: Chaffee by 35,
ZIG: Chaffee by 28.

PORTAGEVILLE AT EAST PRAIRIE — The Eagles are a suprising bunch and don't be picked off if they spring up and win this one. Portageville should win and the panel goes with them all the way, but in a close decision.

CHIEF: Portageville by 10,
FORB: Portageville by 12,
WHALE: Portageville by 7,
ZIG: Portageville by 6.

MALDEN AT ILLMO-SCOTT CITY — Malden suffered against Dexter, then played well against Kennett. Are they up or down this week? Two columnists think they will be up; two think they will be down. All four think they will lose.

CHIEF: I-SC by 22,
FORB: I-SC by 13,
WHALE: I-SC by 14,
ZIG: I-SC by 27.

DONIPHAN AT VALLE-STE. GENEVIEVE — The panel is split on this one, with the panel veterans opting for the Ste. Gen squad.

CHIEF: Valle by 14,
FORB: Valle by 12,
WHALE: Doniphan by 15,
ZIG: Doniphan by 9.

PERRYVILLE AT SIKESTON — "It's Mothers Night, reminds the Chief, convincing Forb that he should change his prediction to the side of the Bulldogs, who haven't lost on that night since its inception as an annual event in 1973. The Chief must have been pretty convincing, since the Forbeven matched Charlie's third-straight "Bulldogs by 1" forecast. "I wouldn't doubt if it turns out to be a scoreless tie," says Whale in reference to the two powerful defensive teams. While the score may not be high, you can bet that both teams will be.

CHIEF: Sikeston by 1,
FORB: Sikeston by 1,
WHALE: Sikeston by 4,
ZIG: Sikeston by 2.

AFC

strong, he should), the Broncos again will be winners.

Kansas City still is rebuilding. So the Chiefs' big plus will be avoiding the cellar, thanks to the presence of Seattle. The Seahawks' defense still is a light year or two away from respectability.

If anyone considered the Patriots as flukes last year, this one will convince them that youth shall be served. With exciting Steve Grogan at quarterback, running on his own as well as running an offense starring runners Sam Cunningham, Don Calhoun and Andy Johnson, plus an occasional pass to Russ Francis, New England will continue to steamroller the opposition.

The same, of course, can be said of Baltimore, with quarterback Bert Jones, 1,200-yard rusher Lydell Mitchell and blazing receiver Roger Carr. The Colts' teugher schedule will be the deciding factor that leaves them No.2 in the East.

Miami has only partially recovered from the disastrous injuries of 1976. That, the high number of young players on defense, the emotional turmoil of players involved in a drug scandal and the absence of superstars of seasons past will keep the Dolphins mediocre. Buffalo has O.J. Simpson, worth a few victories on his own, but not much else. New head Coach Walt Michaels' New York Jets don't even have one superstar. Their defense is okay on third-and-two but can't handle a third-and-22.

Cincinnati gets the nod in the Central Division not only because of its improvement in the draft, but also because of slippage by Pittsburgh.

That defense, though, isn't what it used to be because of linebacker Andy Russell's retirement and cornerback Mel Blount's self-imposed exile. The offense still has the kick with Franco Harris and Rocky Bleier on the ground, Lynn Swann in the air and quarterback Terry Bradshaw leading the way.

Miss Burton decides against teaching position

60 years ago
September 15, 1917

Canalou — Miss Alma Westerfield of Parma visited friends here Saturday and Sunday.

Scott County has been called upon to send its next group of drafted men to the Fort Riley contonment, 40 men being included in the number scheduled to leave tomorrow.

A.J. Poindexter left last Sunday for his new home at Knoxville, Tenn. His many friends in Sikeston were sorry to see him leave town, but hope he will find his new home a pleasant one.

Miss Clarice Burton decided last Saturday that she would not accept the position offered her as teacher of expression in a college at Lagrange, Ga.

50 years ago
September 15, 1927

Arrangements have already been made by replacing the Akin-Sikeston Packing Co., plant, destroyed Monday by fire, with a temporary canning factory. Lumber for the construction of a building and machinery for canning have been ordered and the old building base cleaned off and the ruined machinery cleared away to allow hurried building.

The Morley schools are finishing their second week of school and satisfactory work is being done in spite of warm weather. The high school, with 56 enrolled, has already been visited by W.G. Dillon, state inspector, and County Superintendent Goodin.

Coach Herbert Moore is working his football team regularly in spite of sultry afternoons in an effort to have a hardy squad ready for the early-season games. New Madrid will come here September 30th. Boys out for the sport include: Frank Miller, captain; Wayne Reed, captain; Dick Swaim, Leonard Watson, Bill Baker, Ross Kilgore, Carroll Stutton, John Galeener, all letterman; and Dewell Robinson, Weldon McDonald, Shapley Hunter, Stanley Wallace, Hubert Burris, Tom Lancaster, Raymond Aufdenberg, Bud Coney, Cletus Capps, James Marshall, Oscar Caldwell, and Fred Moser.

What's the law?

The case of the miraculous recovery

BY JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Zeke was injured while working for a railroad company and proved satisfactorily to a jury that he was totally and permanently disabled. The railroad company was thus required to pay him a wheelbarrow-full of money in damages. Consequently, when Zeke demanded back his job several years later, on the grounds that he had completely recovered from his earlier injuries, the railroad company -- despite medical evidence presented by Zeke showing that he was in fine fettle -- absolutely refused to even give him a free train schedule, no less his old job back.

The result? Zeke demanded back his job in court.

"Under the law," he pointed out, "if I've recovered from my injuries, the railroad company has no choice but to rehire me. And according to concrete medical proof, I'm as sound as a brick of gold."

"He's not only sound," responded the attorney for the railroad company, "he's a lot of talk too. That's how come he was able to convince a jury that he had been totally and permanently disabled. And while we weren't willing to accept the permanency of his injury then, we're willing to accept it now. Consequently, as far as we're concerned, Zeke's still totally and permanently disabled, and regardless of what the law may say, he's not going to get his job back."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you require the railroad company to accept Zeke's miraculous recovery and give hime back his job?

This is how the judge rules: NO! The judge held that a man cannot have his cake and eat it too. Having successfully proved that he was totally incapacitated, when it served his purpose to be so, he cannot now claim he is in good working condition. To hold otherwise, noted the judge, would not only be legally wrong, but it would be morally wrong.

STEVENSON, Wash. (AP) — The question of Farrah Fawcett-Majors' acting ability is irrelevant to her fans, says the one-time press agent of the 1950s' ultimate sex goddess, Marilyn Monroe.

"When I handled Marilyn, in her happy days, she was extraordinary," said Roy Craft, recalling his five years, 1952-1957, with the actress. "The difference is, perhaps, that Fawcett-Majors is more of a personality. But an extraordinary personality."

Craft, editor emeritus of the weekly Skamanis County Pioneer who says he finds Miss Fawcett-Majors "delightful," said there is a simple rule in show business: Hustle what you have.

"If you are talking about popularity, marketability, the acting isn't important. Any fine dramatic actress will play the role to which she's assigned," he said.

"But when you get a personality, I think it's a mistake to have her play anything but herself ... The thing is, when someone turns to Farrah Fawcett-Majors on TV, they want Farrah Fawcett-Majors. The question of her acting ability is beside the point."

Teasdale against shifting of area energy programs

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo (AP) — Because of the incresing importance of the vast coal reserves in Missouri and surrounding states, Gov. Joseph Teasdale says he is opposed to any change in regional federal energy programs that would shift control of energy programs away from the areas.

In a letter to President Jimmy Carter, Teasdale expressed "grave concern" over reports the Carter Administation was considering a plan to combine existing federal energy programs in the region that includes Missouri and then shift control of the programs to Chicago.

Right now Kansas City is the regional headquarters for federal energy programs under the Federal Energy Administration (FEA)

However, under the newly created Department of Energy, the FEA and several other agencies which deal with energy would be combined.

Teasdale said it was his understanding the adminstration was planning to combine FEA regional operations with programs in other adjacent regions and make Chicago the new regional headquaretes.

"I am sure you know Missouir, Kansas and Iowa have considerable recoverable reserves of coal," Teasdale wrote Carter. "Although the nature of these reserves have previously impeded their potential development, your adminstration's accelerated coal development policies and certain emerging economic patterns will make these resources much more attractive for future development."

Because of those factors, Teasdale urged Carter to consider keeping the current regional federal programs as they are, and, in fact, said the President should increase energy research and development capability in the area.

The vast quanities of coal and tar sands in the area need full consideration in constructing the nation's energy policy, Teasdale said.

In addition, the governor said the region includes a major portion of the Missouri River Basin, which should be managed in a way which would "accommodate both energy development and its traditional uses."

Stoddard noted for lenient juries

BLOOMFIELD— An unusually high number of acquittals and the frequency of minimum sentences being imposed upon defendants found guilty of violent crimes have gained Stoddard County Circuit Court juries a reputation of leniency over the years.

"It is a well-known fact that juries in Stoddard County are notoriously lenient," says 35th Judicial Circuit Judge Flake L. McHaney of Kennett. "They are monuments of marshmallows," he declared.

Criminal lawyers gladly accept changes of venue to Stoddard County for clients charged with crimes in other court circuits and venue changes to Stoddard from Dunklin County, which also is in the 35th Judicial Circuit, are common.

Of 44 criminal trials scheduled in Stoddard County since Sept. 1, 1973, 25 were on changes of venue, and about 90 per cent of those were from neighboring Dunklin County, Circuit Court records reflect.

During the past four years, 30 jury trials actually were held, the records show. Of these, acquittals were returned in favor of 18 defendants and guilty verdicts were returned against 12. The remaining 14 cases were either pending or guilty pleas had been entered, according to the records.

"I have no idea why Stoddard County juries behave as they do," said the judge. "Their behavior is inconsistent with their environment, which normally would be strongly law-oriented because the population is made up of conservative farmers and hill people," he observed.

A check of closed case files reveals that Stoddard County juries take tougher action against drug offenders than they do against persons charged with violent crimes. Two illustrations are:

— A man charged with possessing and attempting to sell liquid morphine was given a 17-year prison sentence while a man found guilty of armed robbery and assaulting his victim with the intent to kill was given a 10-year prison term.

— A man who was found guilty of possessing and transporting a controlled substance was sentenced to five years in the State Penitentiary, while another man who was charged with first-degree murder and later stood trial on a reduced charge of second-degree murder was sentenced to two years in prison after the jury found him guilty of manslaughter.

The case files also reflected that a defendant charged with manslaughter and leaving the scene of an accident for striking a pedestrian was sentenced to three months in jail and fined $600. Another defendant who was charged with leaving the scene of an accident in which no one was injured was sentenced to two months in jail and fined $100.

Because state law prohibits disclosure of information contained in case files of acquitted defendants, a reporter was not allowed access to expunged files of the 18 cases which went to juries and ended in innocent verdicts.

Judge McHaney, however, recalled cases in which he said the evidence convinced him of a defendant's guilt, only for the jury to return an innocent verdict.

"I have lectured many juries after they brought in a verdict," the judge stated. "I've told them (jurors) that tomorrow when they're setting around in a coffee shop talking about some fatheaded judge who puts criminals out on the street to think about what they did here today."

The judge said the trend "is terrible and I have made numerous talks before civic clubs and other organizations to try to convince them that it is not the judges, but the juries, in many instances, who are putting criminals out on the streets."

Practically all of the changes of venue into Stoddard County come from Dunklin County because they are in the same judicial circuit, Judge McHaney said, and the Supreme Court has said that a defendant may take a venue change to another county within the circuit if he so desires.

The judge and Stoddard County Circuit Clerk Charles Corbin said so many defendants take venue changes from Dunklin to Stoddard County that it puts a burden on the county to pay for the costs of juries, which average $250. In cases which last longer than one day, considerably more expense is involved, they pointed out.

A chief complaint about circuit judges in Missouri is that they are unduly criticized for being too lenient on criminals. But Judge McHaney pointed out that they are bound by findings of a jury in those cases which are submitted to jury trials.

Judges can grant new trials only if there is a conviction and it is determined the court erred; the prosectuion cannot appeal any verdict even though the court may have erred, and a judge can reduce but not increase the sentence imposed by a jury. (Reprinted from Southeast Missourian)

Passengers dead in plane crash of nuclear weapon Army base

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — An Air Force plane slammed into a mountainside on a high security Army base killing all 20 persons aboard when it exploded on impact a half mile from any bunker containing fissionable material, authorities said.

The four-engine plane crashed on Manzano Base, where nuclear weapons are stored, three minutes after its take off from Kirtland Air Force Base at 11:45 p.m. Wednesday.

Kirtland base operations confirmed there were no survivors, said Walter Sprick of the Federal Aviation Administration.

"One big fireball and that was it," a nearby resident said.

Air Force crews using flares and helicopter spotlights recovered at least 15 bodies in a predawn search. Authorities said they did not know whether all of the victims were military personnel.

The plane was assigned to the Tactical Air Command and was used for command and control missions and to accompany fighter aircraft on long-range deployment, a military spokesman said.

Howardville citizens endorse plans for HUD funds

HOWARDVILLE — Citizens attending a communitywide meeting Tuesday night unanimously endorsed plans proposed for the use of $100,000 in funds from the Department of Housing and Urban Development to finance the city's housing rehabilitation program and to provide city fire protection and the services of a city administrator.

Mayor Willie B. Hamilton, who is the recipient agent for HUD programs for the City of Howardville and for North Lilbourn, explained that the HUD funds were for the period beginning Aug. 1 through Aug. 1, 1978.

The fire protection project, estimated to cost $46,350, was discussed and explained by the city officials. The project includes construction of a new fire station estimated to cost $9,800; the purchase of a fully equipped used fire truck at a cost of $14,000; and the purchase and installation of 10 fire plugs.

Following discussion of the housing rehabilitation project in which it was pointed out that the funds requested for interior and exterior work had been cut by HUD, it was agreed by the citizens that only exterior work should be done, as it was last year on each home. This, the citizens agreed, would reflect that no difference was being made among the families in the community. Funding for the housing rehabilitation program amounts to $48,250.

The proposed expenditure of $5,400 for services of a city administrator was also acceptable to the citizens.

ALBANY, Ga. (AP) — Police said a man charged with burglary really hit the ceiling in an Albany hotel — four times in fact.

Officers said the burglar had entered a crawl space Monday night and fell through the ceiling into first one office and then another one before hotel employes gave chase.

He made it back into the crawl space only to fall through yet another ceiling, this time into a stall in a women's restroom.

Still not finished, police said Lawrence Edwards, 22, managed to get into the crawl space a fourth time, but wound up falling again, this time into a stall in the men's restroom.

He was captured by police as he ran from the hotel.

TRENTON, Tenn. (AP) — The speed limit in Trenton is 31 miles per hour and that's the way it will remain despite pressure from the Tennessee Transportation Department, the City Council has decreed.

The council voted Tuesday to retain the limit even though it means the city will have to bear the cost of replacing some old rusty speed limit signs.

The state offered to pay for the new signs if the city would adopt a more common speed limit — say 30 mph or even 35 mph — like other cities.

"Of the people that have talked to me, a big majority of old people and young people think it's unique and want it to stay as it is," said Mayor Glen Hurt.

The speed limit was set about 20 years ago.

ALBANY, Ga. (AP) — Police said a man charged with burglary really hit the ceiling in an Albany hotel — four times in fact.

Officers said the burglar had entered a crawl space Monday night and fell through the ceiling into first one office and then another one before hotel employes gave chase.

He made it back into the crawl space only to fall through yet another ceiling, this time into a stall in a women's restroom.

Still not finished, police said Lawrence Edwards, 22, managed to get into the crawl space a fourth time, but wound up falling again, this time into a stall in the men's restroom.

He was captured by police as he ran from the hotel.

TRENTON, Tenn. (AP) — The speed limit in Trenton is 31 miles per hour and that's the way it will remain despite pressure from the Tennessee Transportation Department, the City Council has decreed.

The council voted Tuesday to retain the limit even though it means the city will have to bear the cost of replacing some old rusty speed limit signs.

The state offered to pay for the new signs if the city would adopt a more common speed limit — say 30 mph or even 35 mph — like other cities.

"Of the people that have talked to me, a big majority of old people and young people think it's unique and want it to stay as it is," said Mayor Glen Hurt.

The speed limit was set about 20 years ago.

under the law to enact the ordinance banning massage parlors entirely, but only chose to regulate them.

The law gives Sikeston the power to prohibit, regulate and supress the parlors, he said.

"I just don't see how you can get much stronger," he said of the power granted to the city.

Stamp said he could not find any court case in the United States stopping a city from regulating massage parlors. The only ones that have are those involving ordinances regulating bi-sexual massages, which Sikeston's ordinance does not prohibit.

Stamp cited court rulings in other parts of the country supporting ordinances similar to Sikeston's.

He added that the Kaiser case, which Yokley had used in his argument, was not upheld because it was tried under the bawdy house statute, which required proof of sexual intercourse and no such proof was offered.

Yokley argued that Sikeston's ordinance was regulation on top of existing ordinance; that once the city issued a merchant's license to the parlor, it could not add additional regulation.

Stamp disagreed and compared the case to the creation of truck route system in Sikeston.

He said a concrete firm has a merchant's license, but the city has the right to create a truck route system and require concrete trucks to use it, even though the firm has a merchant's license.

Yokley said that if the city has the power to regulate businesses under the merchants license law, then the city's massage parlor ordinance is discriminatory because it picks out only massage parlors. Under the law, the city can regulate bowling alleys, movie houses, horse shows, boxing matches and a long list of other activities.

Craig denied the request for an injunction and restraining order following a 10 minute recess.

were more favorable" because of the business ties.

Lance vigorously denied that he backdated any checks to allow him to take income tax deductions for 1976, a possibility suggested in a line of questioning last Friday by Illinois Sen. Charles Percy, ranking Republican on the committee.

"I deeply regret that Sen. Percy saw fit to act in this regrettable matter in making a charge which has no merit whatsoever," he said.

He said checks numbered 919 through 921 in his checkbook were dated prior to checks 917 and 918 because the smaller numbered checks had been removed from the book while blank and kept in his briefcase for possible use later.

"I frequently tear out checks from the checkbook in this matter, so that I will have checks with me when I need them," he said.

Thus did Lance begin the "day in court," which he had said he so eagerly awaited. Earlier, he had declared his spirits high and his determination undaunted as he headed into the arena of his Senate critics and a future as clouded as his past activities have appeared in the panel's week-old hearing.

Turning to criticism of large overdrafts allowed him and members of his family by the Calhoun bank, Lance said:

"The Calhoun First National Bank for years followed a liberal policy with respect to overdrafts. I make no apology for this practice. It was believed by the bank's management that a liberal overdraft policy was a valuable tool for the bank to use in attracting and retaining customers ... members of the Lance family were not accorded special favors regarding overdrafts. The liberal overdraft policy of the bank was available to all depositors."

Lance told the committee that "no evidence" had been offered to support suggestions that he used his relationship with President Carter to exert improper influences on decisions of the U.S. attorney's office in Atlanta to drop an investigation into possible violations arising from the financing of his 1974 gubernatorial campaign.

He said the same applied to suggestions that he had used influence to bring about the lifting of restrictions placed on the Calhoun bank by the Comptroller of the Currency.

Lance has said that the subject of these restrictions was discussed in a general way when he called on regional banking administrator Donald Tarleton in Atlanta last November 22, but both men have said that Lance did not ask for the restrictions to be lifted.

Lance said the restrictions on the bank were "essentially of no consequence to me" because the bank had already complied with the requirements imposed, including discontinuance of criticized overdraft practices.

"The only matter of concern was the paperwork involved in filing monthly progress reports," he said. This requirement was not lifted.

"The sworn testimony of the persons involved is uncontroverted that at no time did I request or suggest to Mr. Tarleton that the agreement between the comptroller's office and the National Bank of Georgia be rescinded," Lance said.

In regard to the investigation by the U.S. attorney's office, the budget director said, "once again, the false impression has been created that something sinister was involved."

After Lance's unsuccessful campaign for governor in 1974 the office of the Comptroller of the Currency investigated whether there had been illegal overdrafts by the Calhoun bank to the Lance campaign committee, allowing Lance to benefit in the financing of his campaign from his relationship with the bank.

The comptroller's office referred the matter to the Justice Department, but former U.S. Attorney John Stokes closed the case without investigation last Dec. 2. Lance's appointment as director of the Office of Management and Budget, which reviews the spending proposals of government agencies, was announced the next day by Carter.

Lance said that to the best of his knowledge the first time he learned about the investigation was in December when he was told of it by his attorney, Sidney Smith of Atlanta.

The patrol said the accident occurred as Bailey, who was traveling east in a pickukp truck, was turning around and became stuck on the shoulder of the highway with the front end of the truck on the eastbound lane. Bailey did not seek medical treatment.

state aid under the Kansas Disaster plan.

The Kansas City commissioners voted to use $250,000 in federal Community Development funds to help low and middle income residents repair damaged water heaters, furnaces and house structures.

Missouri Treasurer James I. Spainhower announced he would deposit $20 million in state deposits in Kansas City area banks to help meet the demand for loans to flood victims.

City workers pulled mangled cars from river and creek beds, pumps whirred as homeowners tried to suck water from basements, and operators of businesses in the Plaza area optimistically predicted things would be booming by Christmas.

Four more bodies were discovered Wednesday during clean-up operations, two along a creek bank about 1½ miles from the Big Blue River in an area about five miles east of the Plaza. Police said they would search that area again on Thursday.

Electricity and natural gas service was gradually restored, and major problems were reported only by Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. A Bell spokesman said although 10,000 phone connections had been repaired, 12,000 still needed to be returned to service and that might not be possible until Friday.

Only one major thoroughfare remained closed in the Kansas City area, due to damage to a dam at adjacent Winnwood Lake. Officials said the dam at the 14-acre lake was so weakened that the lake was being drained.

Death toll now stands at 22 from early week flooding

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Kansas City area residents sorted through the muck and damage caused by two days of flooding early this week, as more bodies were recovered from the debris.

The death toll stood at 22 persons early Thursday, and the body of another drowning victim had been discovered in flooded Leavenworth, Kan., about 35 miles to the northwest.

Mayor Charles Wheeler returned to his inundated city Wednesday night from a shortened foreign trade mission to Europe. Twelve inches of rain in a 24-hour period had sent water rushing into Brush Creek, which overflowed its banks along the exclusive Country Club Plaza shopping center and raged into the Blue River.

"I feel the situation has been handled efficiently," Wheeler said at an airport news conference. "I was certainly sorry about all the damage from the natural disaster while I was away."

Hours before his arrival, President Jimmy Carter had declared Jackson, Clay, Platte, Ray and Lafayette counties disaster areas, making residents, small businesses and local governments eligible for lows-cost loans and grants.

Damage estimates rose as high as $50 million.

Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale, who had requested the disaster declaration, expressed pleasure with the speed of the announcement.

"The quick response will help those affected by the flood to begin the task of recovery," he said.

A similar disaster relief request from Kansas Gov. Robert Bennett had not reached Washington late Wednesday. Bennett said the request would be forwarded to Carter after a damage assessment was made.

"It will run into the millions and millions of dollars," Bennett had said earlier.

The Kansas governor issued a proclamation declaring a state of disaster emergency in 10 northeastern Kansas counties, making them eligible for
